Mazour, 1969 Russia Edward Acton, 2014-09-19 This text has established itself as the best general introduction to Russian history providing a forceful and highly readable survey from earliest times to the post Soviet State At the heart of the book is the changing relationship between the State and Russian society at large The second edition has been substantially rewritten and updated and new material and fresh insights from recently accessible research have been incorporated into every chapter Jews under Tsars and Communists Robert Weinberg, 2024-02-08 Tracing the evolving nature of popular and official beliefs about the purported nature of the Jews from the 18th century onwards Russia and the Jewish Question explores how perceptions of Jews in late Imperial Russia and the Soviet Union shaped the regimes policies toward them In so doing Robert Weinberg provides a fruitful lens through which to investigate the social economic political and cultural developments of modern Russia Here Weinberg reveals that the Jewish Question and by extension anti-Semitism emerged at the end of the 18th century when the partitions of Poland made hundreds of thousands of Jews subjects of the Russian crown He skillfully argues the phrase itself implies the singular nature of Jews as a group of people whose religion culture and occupational make up prevent them from fitting into predominantly Christian societies The book then expounds how other characteristics were associated with the group over time in particular debates about rights of citizenship the impact of industrialization the emergence of the nation state and the proliferation of new political ideologies and movements contributed to the changing nature of the Jewish Question Its content may have not remained static but its purpose consistently questions whether or not Jews pose a threat to the stability and well being of the societies in which they live and this in a specifically Russian context is what Weinberg examines so expertly State and Society in Tsarist and Communist Russia Jacob Walkin,1952
