In Defence of Organisation Theory

Lex Donaldson, 1985-09-12 This book provides a concise clear survey and defence of organizational theory That theory and its associated research has in recent years become subject to strong criticism Rival perspectives on organizations have been put forward One of these stresses that organizations need to be understood as made up of individual people Another asserts the need to see organizations as part of the conflicts and radical struggles in society These alternative views have led to a host of critiques of conventional organization studies It is attacked as being tautological philosophically naive ideological and managerially biased To date there has been no substantial reply to these criticisms by a protagonist of organization theory This volume uniquely fills that gap In part one the author examines and rebuts each of the major lines of criticism In part two the rival approaches suggested by the critics are themselves subjected to an analysis of their limitations The book concludes with a new model of organizational design which provides a synthesis of previous research

Knowledge and Identity

Gabrielle Ivinson, Brian Davies, John Fitz, 2010-11-23 What in the digital era is knowledge Who has knowledge and whose knowledge has value Postmodernism has introduced a relativist flavour into educational research such that big questions about the purposes of education have tended to be eclipsed by minutiae Changes in economic and financial markets induce a sense that we are also experiencing an intellectual credit crunch Societies can no longer afford to think about the role of education merely in relation to national markets and national citizenry There is growing recognition that once again we need big thinking using big theoretical ideas in working on local problems of employability sustainability and citizenship Drawing on aspects of Bernstein's work that have attracted an international following for many years the international contributors to this book raise questions about knowledge production and subjectivity in times dominated by market forces privatisation and new forms of state regulation The book is divided into three sections Part one extends Bernstein's sociology of knowledge by revitalizing fundamental questions such as what is knowledge how is it produced and what are its functions within education and society in late modernity It demonstrates that big theory like big science provides immense resources for thinking ourselves out of crisis because in contradistinction to micro theory we are able to contemplate global transformations in ways which otherwise would remain unthinkable Part two considers the new hybrid forms of knowledge that are emerging in the gap opened up between economic markets and academic institutions across a range of countries Bernstein said in the 1970s that schools cannot compensate for society but we might now ask can universities compensate for the economy Part three adds new conceptual tools to the understanding of subjectivity within Bernstein's sociology of knowledge and elaborates conceptual developments about pedagogic regulation consciousness and embodiment This book will appeal to sociologists educationists and higher educators internationally and to students on sociology of education curriculum and policy studies courses
