entirely absent Based on a review of research literature from sociology organizational psychology and behavioural economics this book develops a theory of consent generation and distinguishes three groups of consent producing mechanisms socialization incentive mechanisms and participation and interest representation It presents an empirical analysis of how these mechanisms work in Russian and Chinese automotive factories and shows how socio cultural factors and labour regulation explain the differences between both countries regarding consent and control in the workplace The book contributes to two research debates First it examines the generation of consent in the workplace a core topic of the sociology of work and organization Its particular focus is on consent generation in authoritarian societies Secondly the book contributes to the debate about the reasons for the completely different trajectories of post communist Russia and China The book provides an empirical analysis that explains the different work behaviours of employees in both countries and links the micro level of the workplace and the macro level of institutions and organizational cultures

The Oxford Handbook of Employment Relations Adrian Wilkinson, Geoffrey Wood, Richard Deeg, 2014-03-13 There have been numerous accounts exploring the relationship between institutions and firm practices However much of this literature tends to be located into distinct theoretical traditional silos such as national business systems social systems of production regulation theory or varieties of capitalism with limited dialogue between different approaches to enhance understanding of institutional effects Again evaluations of the relationship between institutions and employment relations have tended to be of the broad brushstroke nature often founded on macro data and with only limited attention being accorded to internal diversity and details of actual practice The Handbook aims to fill this gap by bringing together an assembly of comprehensive and high quality chapters to enable understanding of changes in employment relations since the early 1970s Theoretically based chapters attempt to link varieties of capitalism business systems and different modes of regulation to the specific practice of employment relations and offer a truly comparative treatment of the subject providing frameworks and empirical evidence for understanding trends in employment relations in different parts of the world Most notably the Handbook seeks to incorporate at a theoretical level regulationist accounts and recent work that link bounded internal systemic diversity with change and at an applied level a greater emphasis on recent applied evidence specifically dealing with the employment contract its implementation and related questions of work organization It will be useful to academics and students of industrial relations political economy and management
