Reconstructing Archaeology Theory And Practice:

Re-constructing Archaeology Michael Shanks, Christopher Tilley, 2016-09-17 In Re Constructing Archaeology Shanks and Tilley aim to challenge the disciplinary practices of both traditional and the new archaeology and to present a radical alternative a critically self conscious archaeology aware of itself as practice in the present and equally a social archaeology that appreciates artefacts not merely as objects of analysis but as part of a social world of past and present that is charged with meaning It is a fresh and invigorating contribution to the emergence of a philosophically and politically informed archaeology

Re-constructing Archaeology Michael Shanks, Christopher Y. Tilley, 1992 First published in 1992 Routledge is an imprint of Taylor Francis an informa company

Global Archaeological Theory Pedro Paulo Funari, Andrés Zaranekin, Emily Stovel, 2006-04-07 Archaeological theory has gone through a great upheaval in the last 50 years from the processual theory which wanted to make archaeology more scientific to post processual theory which understands that interpreting human behavior even of past cultures is a subjective study This subjective approach incorporates a plurality of readings thereby implying that different interpretations are always possible allowing us to modify and change our ideas under the light of new information and or interpretive frameworks In this way interpretations form a continuous flow of transformation and change and thus archaeologists do not uncover a real past but rather construct a historical past or a narrative of the past Post processual theory also incorporates a conscious and explicit political interest on the past of the scholar and the subject This includes fields and topics such as gender issues ethnicity class landscapes and consumption This reflects a conscious attempt to also decentralize the discipline from an imperialist point of view to an empowering one Method and theory also means being politically aware and engaged to incorporate diverse critical approaches to improve understanding of the past and the present This book focuses on the fundamental theoretical issues found in the discipline and thus both engages and represents the very rich plurality of the post processual approach to archaeology The book is divided into four sections Issues in Archaeological Theory Archaeological Theory and Method in Action Space and Power in Material Culture and Images as Material Discourse

Reader in Archaeological Theory David S. Whitley, 1998 This Reader in Archaeological Theory presents sixteen articles of key theoretical significance in a format which makes this notoriously complex area easier for students to understand This volume provides an intellectual history of different approaches to archaeology which contextualizes the complex traditions of cognitive archaeology and postprocessualism on which it focuses organizes theories of archaeology the meanings of things the prehistoric mind and cognition gender ideology and social theory and archaeology's relationship to today's society and politics includes lucid section introductions to each section which provide context explain why the papers are so significant and summarize their key points emphasizes research from the New World making archaeological theory especially relevant and accessible to students in North America

Approaches to Archaeological Ceramics Carla M. Sinopoli, 2013-06-29 More than any other category of evidence ceramics offers archaeologists their most abundant and potentially enlightening source of information on the past Being made primarily of clay a relatively inexpensive material that is available in every region ceramics became essential in virtually every society in the world during the past ten thousand years The straightforward technology of preparing forming and firing clay into hard durable shapes has meant that societies at various levels of complexity have come to rely on it for a wide variety of tasks Ceramic vessels quickly became essential for many household and productive tasks Food preparation cooking and storage the very basis of settled village life could not exist as we know them without the use of ceramic vessels Often these vessels broke into pieces but the virtually indestructible quality of the ceramic material itself meant that these pieces would be preserved for centuries waiting to be recovered by modern archaeologists The ability to create ceramic material with diverse physical properties to form vessels into so many different shapes and to decorate them in limitless manners led to their use in far more than utilitarian contexts Some vessels were especially made to be used in trade manufacturing activities or rituals while ceramic material was also used to make other items such as figurines models and architectural ornaments

The Neolithic of Britain and Ireland Vicki Cummings, 2017-05-18 The Neolithic of Britain and Ireland provides a synthesis of this dynamic period of prehistory from the end of the Mesolithic through to the early Beaker period Drawing on new excavations and the application of new scientific approaches to data from this period this book considers both life and death in the Neolithic It offers a clear and concise introduction to this period but with an emphasis on the wider and on going research questions It is an important text for students new to the study of this period of prehistory as well as acting as a reference for students and scholars already researching this area The book begins by considering the Mesolithic prelude specifically the millennium prior to the start of the Neolithic in Britain and Ireland It then goes on to consider what life was like for people at the time alongside the monumental record and how people treated the dead This is presented chronologically with separate chapters on the early Neolithic middle Neolithic late Neolithic and early Beaker periods Finally it considers future research priorities for the study of the Neolithic

A Year Inland Barbara Belyea, 2001-02-14 Anthony Henday a young Hudson's Bay Company employee set out from York Factory in June 1754 to winter with trading Indians along the Saskatchewan River He adapted willingly and easily to their way of life he also kept a journal in which he described the plains region and took note of rival French traders success at their inland posts A copy of Henday's journal was immediately sent to the company directors in London They rewarded Henday handsomely although they were uncertain where he had travelled what groups he had met on the plains and what success he had in opposing rival French traders Since then uncertainty about Henday's year inland has increased The original journal disappeared only four copies dating from 1755 to about 1782 are extant Each text differs from the other three the differences range from variant spellings to word choice to contradictory statements on vital questions All four copies are the work of a company clerk later factor named Andrew Graham who used them to support his own views on HBC trading policies Twentieth century scholars have based their claims for Henday's importance as an explorer, trader and observer of Native cultures on a poorly edited transcript of the 1782 text. They have been unaware or careless of the journal's textual ambiguity. A Year Inland presents all four copies for the first time together with contextual notes and a commentary that reassesses the journal's information on plains geography, people and trade.

Science and Technology in Historic Preservation Ray A. Williamson, Paul R. Nickens, 2012-12-06 Technology transfer has played an increasingly important role in historic preservation during the latter half of the twentieth century, a situation attested to by the undertaking of an important congressional study in 1986 that assessed the role of federal agencies in the field. In this book leading researchers update the earlier findings and contribute state-of-the-art reviews and evaluations of technological progress in their areas of expertise.

Darwinian Archaeologies Herbert D.G. Maschner, 2013-06-29 Just over 20 years ago the publication of two books indicated the reemergence of Darwinian ideas on the public stage: E.O. Wilson's Sociobiology: The New Synthesis and Richard Dawkins' The Selfish Gene. Spelt out and developed the implications of ideas that had been quietly revolutionizing biology for some time. Most controversial of all, needless to say, was the suggestion that such ideas had implications for human behavior in general and social behavior in particular. Nowhere was the outcry greater than in the field of anthropology, for anthropologists saw themselves as the witnesses and defenders of human diversity and plasticity in the face of what they regarded as a biological determinism supporting a right-wing racist and sexist political agenda. Indeed, how could a discipline inheriting the social and cultural determinisms of Boas, Whorf and Durkheim do anything else? Life for those who ventured to challenge this orthodoxy was not always easy. In the mid-1990s such views are still widely held and these two strands of anthropology have tended to go their own way happily not talking to one another. Nevertheless in the intervening years Darwinian ideas have gradually begun to encroach on the cultural landscape in a variety of ways and topics that had not been linked together since the mid-19th century have once again come to be seen as connected. Modern genetics turns out to be of great significance in understanding the history of humanity.

Historic Landscapes and Mental Well-being Timothy Darvill, Kerry Barrass, Laura Drysdale, Vanessa Heaslip, Yvette Staelens, 2019-09-05 Using archaeological sites and historic landscapes to promote mental well-being represents one of the most significant advances in archaeological resource management for many years. Prompted by the Human Henge project, Stonehenge Avebury World Heritage Site, this volume provides an overview of work going on across Britain and the near Continent.

The Politics and Practices of Cultural Heritage in the Middle East Irene Maffi, 2014-04-21 During the nineteenth century cultural heritage became a dominant feature of the political ideology of the European states and of their colonies. It became a new form of legitimization for the rising nation state, cementing its inextricable link with that nation's politics and practices The set of concepts and practices defining cultural heritage were exported to and imposed over the colonized populations in North Africa and the Near East The legacy of the colonial period has proven very significant in the domain of cultural heritage which has become a crucial cultural arena in many Arab states As in the majorities of post colonial states in the Arab world the inherited paradigm of cultural heritage has been subject to various forms of adaption and re elaboration that have made it a lively and complex space of negotiations between various actors Thus in The Politics of Cultural Heritage in the Middle East Irene Maffi and Rami Daher draw together expert scholars to unravel these complex processes that are involved in the definition production and consumption of heritage and its material culture in the Middle East and the dynamics of the key actors involved The variety of the cases analysed that cover the region from Morocco to Lebanon as well as the multiplicity of the actors concerned such as the state post colonial or colonial international organizations municipal councils local communities families and even exceptional personalities highlights and explores the complex processes where very local and specific dynamics intertwine with transnational economic political and cultural fluxes In its examination of the workings of cultural heritage in the Middle East this book is an important resource for students and scholars of Middle East Studies Cultural History History of Art and Architecture and for stakeholders involved in the field of cultural heritage

Myth, Memory, and the Making of the American Landscape Paul A.

Shackel, 2001-09-30 Penetrating insight into the processes by which our collective historical memory is constructed Through a range of case studies the authors explore how and why certain landscapes and monuments are intentionally endowed with specific messages why certain stories are obscured or forgotten and how collective memories change over time James Delle Franklin and Marshall College The authors in this collection show how the creation of a collective memory of highly visible objects and landscapes is an ongoing struggle their meanings always being constructed changed and challenged The sites and symbols the authors address are nationally recognized and include a balance of places that illuminate class ethnic racial and historical experiences Focusing on material culture they explore the tensions that exist among various groups elite landowners the National Park Service preservationists minority groups who compete for control over the interpretation of American public history

Bond, Angela

Gilliam, 2020-04-23 First published in 1994 Anthropological and archaeological enquiry are shaped by the historical times in which they are formulated This collection of essays examines how mainstream scholarship constructs the past in the case of anthropologists usually the past of other peoples By creating another people's cultural history scholars appropriate it and turn it into a form of domination by one group over another Mainstream scholarship has often failed to recognize the intellectual and scholarly contribution of subjugated peoples This volume looks at the way postcolonial scholars are redefining the nature of scholarship and themselves in order to develop a more egalitarian discourse Social Constructions of the Past examines labour race and gender and its relationship to power and class It includes essays on a broad range of topics from the role of intellectuals in restructuring a non apartheid South Africa to Haitian working class women using sexuality to resist domination Byzantine Epirus Myrto Veikou, 2012-05-25 This text draws on five years of archaeological and topographical fieldwork in order to attempt a re reading of Byzantine texts in accordance with recent perceptions of the historicity of space

Heritage Studies Marie Louise Stig Sørensen, John Carman, 2009-09-18 This is the first volume specifically dedicated to the consolidation and clarification of Heritage Studies as a distinct field with its own means of investigation It presents the range of methods that can be used and illustrates their application through case studies from different parts of the world including the UK and USA The challenge that the collection makes explicit is that Heritage Studies must develop a stronger recognition of the scope and nature of its data and a concise yet explorative understanding of its analytical methods The methods considered fall within three broad categories textual discourse analysis methods for investigating people's attitudes and behaviour and methods for exploring the material qualities of heritage The methods discussed and illustrated range from techniques such as text analysis interviews participant observation to semiotic analysis of heritage sites and the use of GIS Each paper discusses the ways in which methods used in social analysis generally are explored and adapted to the specific demands that arise when applied to the investigation of heritage in its many forms

Heritage Studies is a seminal volume that will help to define the field The global perspective and the shared focus upon the development of reflexive methodologies ensure that the volume explores these central issues in a manner that is simultaneously case specific and of general relevance
