Recovering for Psychological Injuries William A. Barton, 2010-01-01 Recovering for Psychological Injuries William A. Barton, 1990 Psychological Injuries William J. Koch, 2006 Human emotional suffering has been studied for centuries but the significance of psychological injuries within legal contexts has only recently been recognized As the public becomes increasingly aware of the ways in which mental health affects physical and financial well being psychological injuries comprise a rapidly growing set of personal injury insurance claims Although the diverse range of problems that people claim to suffer from are serious and often genuine the largely subjective and unobservable nature of psychological conditions has led to much skepticism about the authenticity of psychological injury claims Improved assessment methods and research on the economic and physical health consequences of psychological distress has resulted in exponential growth in the litigation related to such conditions Integrating the history of psychological injuries both from legal and mental health perspectives this book offers compelling discussions of relevant statutory and case law Focussing especially on posttraumatic stress disorder it addresses the current status and empirical limitations of forensic assessments of psychological injuries and alerts readers to common vulnerabilities in expert evidence from mental health professionals In addition it also uses the latest empirical research to provide the best forensic methods for assessing both clinical conditions such as posttraumatic stress disorder and for alternative explanations such as malingering The authors offer state of the art information on early intervention psychological therapies and pharmaceutical treatments for posttraumatic stress disorder and stimulating suggestions for further research into this complex phenomenon A comprehensive guide to psychological injuries this book will be an indispensable resource for all mental health practitioners researchers and legal professionals who work with psychological injuries Identifying and Recovering from Psychological Trauma Brian Trappier, 2009 Explains how abuse victims can identify and recover from PTSD and other forms of psychological trauma Causality of Psychological Injury Gerald Young, Andrew W. Kane, Keith Nicholson, 2007-05-31 This sequel to the authors Psychological Knowledge in Court offers a welcome expansion on key concepts terms and issues in causality bringing much needed clarity to psychological injury assessments and the legal contexts that employ them Focusing on PTSD traumatic brain injury and chronic pain and grounding readers in salient U S and Canadian case law Causality sets out a multifactorial causality framework to facilitate admissibility of psychological evidence in court Issues concerning malingering are examined in depth as are clinical gray areas that can jeopardize validity At the same time the book clearly explains what lawyers and clinicians need to understand about each other s work of crucial importance since the two sides often seem to speak at cross purposes The authors and six guest contributors Illustrate the roles of preexisting vulnerabilities traumatic events and post event occurrences in psychological impairment and disability Review the literature on PTSD TBI and chronic pain for legal relevance Identify current challenges and controversies in the field as well as emerging areas for research Recommend methods and instruments for conducting more courtworthy assessments Provide a detailed critical review of malingering and related phenomena Propose a more accurate shared terminology of causality Valid causality judgments are based on sound knowledge of research on large populations and careful testing of individuals at the same time they must conform to stringent legal standards of relevance and reliability to be accepted for testimony Forensic practitioners and attorneys will turn to Causality of Psychological Injury as their professional paths increasingly cross in seeking comprehensive and state of the art information

First Responder Careers Expose Individuals to Higher Risks of Developing Trauma Some careers include a higher likelihood of experiencing traumatic events that can lead to the development of PTSD Serving in the military is a high risk factor for developing PTSD However combat veterans develop PTSD at different rates depending on the severity and length of exposure to traumatic experiences There are also high incidences of reported sexual harassment and sexual abuse in the military As a result the rates of PTSD are relatively high compared to the overall prevalence in the general population Not only can law enforcement officers experience direct threats and stressful conditions but they also regularly witness the devastating effects of assaults robberies kidnappings and violent events However individuals in this profession have lower than expected rates of PTSD surprisingly An estimated 20 percent overall may result from having access to counseling and rigorous pre employment screenings EMTs and paramedics are routinely exposed to life threatening incidents and have more health problems than individuals in other occupations PTSD rates in this group are as high as 20 percent PTSD prevalence in this profession is comparable to law enforcement Firefighters conduct paramedic activities and are the first responders to natural disasters Firefighting is a dangerous profession that exposes workers to stressful conditions and traumatic events ranging from threats to their safety and experiencing the devastating effects of catastrophes As a result the prevalence of PTSD in this group can be as high as 20 percent Volunteer firefighters may have even higher rates because they don't have access to the same level of support as career firefighters Healthcare workers especially those working in emergency rooms and intensive care units are also at higher risk For example nurses working in critical care units are more likely to develop PTSD than nurses in other groups In addition while senior level nurses report fewer PTSD symptoms than junior ones they report higher rates of burnout Finally healthcare workers exposed to patients that have experienced violence such as an assault victim are more likely to develop PTSD than surgeons who treat assault victims Rescue workers medical workers and volunteers who act as first responders during disasters witness the aftermath of horrific events and can even become involved in severe traumatic events The prevalence of PTSD in these individuals has been estimated to be between 15 and 30 percent Journalists who work as war correspondents are at higher risk of being injured killed or kidnapped Their lifetime prevalence of PTSD which can be as high as 30 percent reflects their lack of access to support and PTSD treatment options Transit and train operators are frequently exposed to physical threats and witness suicide incidents such as person under train events Exposure to these traumatic and threatening circumstances can be a daily or weekly occurrence Bus drivers are more prone to PTSD because they have more direct contact with the general public than train drivers locked in secure train cabs In these high risk professions the incidence of trauma declines when policies are in place to debrief victims give victims immediate access to counseling and screen for individuals at high risk of having adverse reactions to traumatic conditions
