However, cities are also centers of wealth creation and consumption which both drive environmental degradation. It is clear that cities need to re-establish themselves as low energy low carbon systems but the transformation is complex in many ways and time is running out. This Special Issue Energy Efficient Cities of Today and Tomorrow seeks to provide a more profound understanding of the future energy requirements of urban areas and low energy and low carbon cities. The published papers range from macro level assessments of cities manifesting themselves as forerunners in their environmental work to micro level studies of pro environmental attitudes and their impacts on individual emissions, a carbon footprint, impacts of sharing of goods and services.

What It Is Like To Perceive J. Christopher Maloney, 2018-06-15 Naturalistic cognitive science when realistically rendered rightly maintains that to think is to deploy contentful mental representations. Accordingly conscious perception memory and anticipation are forms of cognition that despite their introspectively manifest differences may coincide in content. Sometimes we remember what we saw other times we predict what we will see. Why then does what it is like consciously to perceive differ so dramatically from what it is like merely to recall or anticipate the same? Why if thought is just representation does the phenomenal character of seeing a sunset differ so stunningly from the tepid character of recollecting or predicting the sun's descent? J. Christopher Maloney argues that unlike other cognitive modes perception is in fact immediate direct acquaintance with the object of thought.

Although all mental representations carry content the vehicles of perceptual representation are uniquely composed of the very objects represented To perceive the setting sun is to use the sun and its properties to cast a peculiar cognitive vehicle of demonstrative representation This vehicle's embedded referential term is identical with and demonstrates the sun itself And the vehicle's self attributive demonstrative predicate is itself forged from a property of that same remote star So in this sense the perceiving mind is an extended mind Perception is unbrokered cognition of what is real exactly as it really is Maloney's theory of perception will be of great interest in the philosophy of mind and cognitive science      Marketing Excellence 2
