Shinhee Chulchuln, Department of Anthropology, Seoul National University, Seoul 151-747, Korea

Therapeutic and other community work conducted by the Korean Agency for Children and Youth has changed the way that the child care system now functions. It is because of this change in the kind of a developmental child care system available that, among the various working Korean couples and generations, only a small number have the means to maintain a child in the nation's private day-care or residential centers.
