McBride,L.

Dobuzinskis, Marjorie Griffin Cohen, J. Busumtwi-Sam, 2002-12-31 Global Instability Uncertainty and New Visions in Political Economy presents a series of papers that address the political consequences of globalization for states and their populations while exploring the issue of alternatives to the model of globalization we are presently experiencing. The focus moves from the world of international agreements to the national and sub national dilemmas that are posed by attempting to manage a set of global developments within a given territory. The initial chapter by Daniel Drache explores a still born post war international organization the International Trade Organization that offers a different vision of how a globally integrated economy might operate. A number of papers then explore the challenges posed by today's globalization including currency instability in an environment of financial deregulation the rights conferred on investors by the North American Free Trade Agreement and the progressive liberalization of trade in services built into the General Agreement on Trade in Services.

Money, Politics and Health Care Institute for Research on Public Policy, Queen's University (Kingston, Ont.). Institute of Intergovernmental Relations, 2004. Current tensions in intergovernmental fiscal arrangements are thus important impediment to improving the health care system. At the same time the failure of provinces to correct health care problems acts a serious irritant in intergovernmental relations creating a vicious cycle where deficiencies in intergovernmental fiscal relations make health care reform difficult while failures to effect health care reform increase conflict between the provinces and the federal government. This collection of essays analyses key issues in federal provincial health care relations particularly the fiscal component. The authors look at why there is a role for the federal government in health care and consider the critical issues in recent intergovernmental political battles over this role. The issues of whether the vertical federal provincial fiscal imbalance is myth or reality how much the federal government does and should contribute financially to provincial health care programs and methods for settling disputes such as those over user fees are discussed. The authors also provide concrete proposals for reconstructing the federal provincial partnership. Profit Is Not the Cure Maude Barlow, 2011-02-18. On July 12 1966 the Medical Care Insurance Act was passed by the federal House of Commons after a ferocious public debate that pitted the vast majority of Canadians against a powerful alliance of business insurance companies and doctors. More than thirty years later the same battle is being fought all over again. Only now the forces opposed to medicare are more ideologically unified more richly endowed and tied to transnational corporations whose power exceeds that of entire countries. In Profit Is Not the Cure Maude Barlow traces the history of medicare in Canada. She compares it with both public and private systems in other parts of the world. And she contrasts it with the brutally divisive system that exists in the United States where forty four million people have no medical insurance and millions more get minimal care through profit driven health maintenance.

organizations From the point of view of most patients the United States health care model is a disaster But the proponents of privatization in Canada supported by the right wing media and corporate lobbyists are determined to impose American style reforms on the Canadian public Three provinces British Columbia Alberta and Ontario are moving ahead rapidly to enlarge the role of commerce in the provision of health care services They are introducing user fees delisting procedures that previously were covered and encouraging private corporations to move into areas that used to be the exclusive domain of the public system While the prime minister and federal cabinet have paid lipservice to the principles of medicare they have made it clear by their actions that they will do nothing to impede the destruction of those principles by the provinces In fact their enthusiastic support of NAFTA and the impending Free Trade Agreement of the Americas FTAA and General Agreement on Trade in Services GATS has made the defence of medicare increasingly difficult Canadians overwhelmingly support medicare Many however have been persuaded that it is a luxury we can no longer afford Maude Barlow argues that this proposition is wrong An earlier generation fought a bitter battle to bring medicare into existence Another battle must be fought now to save it But we owe it to the founders of the system as well as to future generations to take up the cause again This important book shows the way
