Reconstructive Surgery Of The Middle Ear:

Reconstructive Surgery of the Middle Ear Adolph Wolferman, 1970 Reconstructive Surgery of the Middle Ear Jun'ichi Suzuki, 1999 This book will be a companion for the surgeon performing tympanoplasty Tympanoplasty is a unique operation which half a century ago appeared as the first functional surgery under microscopy in the history of medicine There are several different surgical approaches to any case of chronic ear disease and in each case the best method of tympanoplasty should be used The success rate of tympanoplasty should be high enough to be able to operate when there is only one hearing ear and a success rate of 100% is required Hence the objective of training ear surgeons is to obtain 100% confidence in their tympanoplasty Most ear surgeons would agree that closed method tympanoplasty is the best method of which two techniques can be chosen closed method intact posterior canal wall technique which requires more skills because of a limited visual field and the closed method posterior canal wall reconstruction method The latter is recommended in this book and is shown in detail from basic knowledge and information to expert advice The book shows some secrets for those who want to be independent surgeons and good enough to dare to operate on the only hearing ear The book is richly illustrated In addition it has the unique aspect of many Box articles Important issues appear again in Boxes where they are summarized Several Box articles on special subjects are contributed by colleagues who previously worked or studied in the authors hospital Surgery and Pathology of the Middle Ear Jean F.E. Grote,2012-12-06 The need for better implant materials was a stimulus for the increa sing knowledge of Biomaterial Scientists Different surgical disciplines were very successful in the use of prostheses especially because they based their surgery on a good cooperation with fundamental scientists The use of alloplastic implant materials in the reconstruction of the middle ear has not always been successful We all know the initial success in the sixties and the disappointments after short term follow up periods Because of these failures Otolaryngology missed contact with the new developments in Biomaterial Science However we must realize that in the reconstruction of a sound conducting system our most successful results are achieved with alloplastic implants John Shea introduced the use of Teflon prostheses in the restoration of hearing in otosclerosis and ever since this has been the most rewarding reconstructive middle ear operation With the development of the intact canal wall techniques and the use of homologous implant materials the problems of middle ear surgery seemed to be solved However we now know that closed techniques have disadvantages after longer post operative periods and the use of homologous implant materials give problems Collection of these implants is not always easy and the preservation is still in discussion Furthermore problems of resorption rejection or fixation give uncertain post operative results Middle ear prostheses of different new implant materials are promoted by industry and good results are published but also disappointments after shorter or longer periods
