Red Hills Migrants And The State In The Highlands Of:

Red Hills Andrew Hardy, 2003-03-31 Several million rural inhabitants of Vietnam's northern deltas made the decision to move during the twentieth century seeking to make new homes in the country's highlands. This book offers a historical analysis of the political economy of migration stimulated by the French colonial and independent socialist states. It shows how socialist policies especially changed the face of the highlands as settlers from the plains turned the hills red. Red Hills

Andrew David Hardy, 2005 During the twentieth century several million rural inhabitants of Vietnam's northern delta made the decision to move home seeking new space for themselves in the country's highlands. Their decisions and the settlements they created had wide ranging effects on their home communities and on the people and environment of their destinations. Many migrations were made in response to policy decisions made in Hanoi first by the French colonial authorities and later by Vietnam's independent socialist states. This ground breaking study of the settlements of Vietnam's highland regions offers a historical analysis of and provides profound insights into the political economy of migration both in Vietnam and elsewhere the Vietnamese highlands as settlers from the plains turned the hills red. Placing people's experiences in the context of government policy and national history this book explores their anticipations, difficulties, achievements and disappointments, highlighting the geopolitical importance of the highlands. The study can be read as a contribution to migration studies in South east Asia but also as a grassroots history of 20th century Vietnam. Written in a lively reading style and illustrated by numerous maps and photographs this study promises to become a classic in Vietnamese historical studies. On The Single Mothers and the State's Embrace Harriet M. Phinney, 2022-02-01 In the mid 1980s after the Indochina Wars a shortage of men meant that many single women in Vietnam found themselves without suitable marital prospects A number of these women chose to pursue single motherhood by asking for a child xin con asking men to get them pregnant out of wedlock Xin con appeared to be a radical departure from traditional Vietnamese kinship values and practices which were based in Confucian patriarchal and patrilineal reproductive interests However this innovative solution was rooted in both pre and postwar values practices and notions of gender kinship love and sexuality This ethnography explores the practice of xin con among single mothers in the postwar era and today and considers the ways their reproductive agency was embraced rather than rejected by the Vietnamese state as it entered the global market economy Rather than condemning or trying to restrict older single women's reproductive agency government officials enacted policies that would accommodate both the women and the state a strategy that represents an intriguing alignment of Confucian heritage Communist ideology and governing tactics and demonstrates the social power of women
