Kosco-Vilbois, 2012-12-06 Follicular dendritic cells FDCs are unique among cells of the immune system While their morphological characteristics resulted in their inclusion as a dendritic cell type they differ quite significantly from the other members of the dendritic cell family In contrast to T cell associated dendritic cells or the Langerhans cells found in the skin FDCs reside in highly organized B cell follicles within secondary lymphoid tissues This site of residence provided a nomenclature committee in 1982 with the second descriptive factor for the derivation of their name The cardinal feature of FDCs is to trap and retain antigen on the surface of their dendritic processes for extended amounts of time and it is this feature that provides the conceptual component for the title of this book In response to an antigenic challenge primary B cell follicles undergo dynamic events giving rise to germinal centers which are associated with activation expansion and differentiation processes of B cells The interactions of B cells with FDCs and T cells in the germinal centers are essential for generating the complete repertoire of antibody isotypes obtained during an antibody response In addition stimuli either initiated or maintained during the germinal center response leads to production of high affinity antibodies through the processes of somatic mutation and clonal selection In this context FDCs act as a pivotal source of antigen They accumulate foreign proteins e g
