Regulation Of Hematopoiesis:

Regulation of Hematopoiesis: Red cell production Albert Saul Gordon,1970 Regulation of Hematopoietic and Leukemic Stem Cells Kenneth Demire Gibbs,2010 Hematopoiesis is organized as a cellular hierarchy in which long term self renewing hematopoietic stem cells HSC give rise to all lineages of blood cells for the lifetime of an organism Following the prospective isolation of mouse HSC in the late 1980s research over the past two decades has focused on refining the phenotypic compartment where HSC reside and identifying the numerous cell intrinsic and extrinsic mechanisms important for their maintenance Many of these pathways are misappropriated in hematopoietic malignancies such as leukemia It has been proposed that like normal hematopoiesis leukemia is organized as a cellular hierarchy in which a leukemic stem cell population LSC is uniquely able to self renew and gives rise to the heterogeneous lineages of cells that compose the tumor This thesis will cover the mechanisms regulating the behavior of normal hematopoietic stem cells and leukemic stem cells First phospho specific flow cytometry was utilized to define the responsiveness of human HSC to cytokine stimulation This direct biochemical analysis demonstrated that HSC respond directly and rapidly to a broader number of direct stimuli in vitro and in vivo than previously appreciated This included Granulocyte Colony Stimulating Factor G CSF a cytokine used clinically to mobilize HSC to the peripheral blood prior to bone marrow transplantation The direct HSC response to G CSF is shown to affect the behavior of the HSC pool in vitro causing cell cycle entry and increased proliferation and in vivo negatively regulating active hematopoiesis in the short term Thus it is proposed that cytokines long known to impact the function of mature lineage cells also are important for the steady state regulation of HSC activity Next two mouse models of AML were utilized to determine the mechanisms important for regulation of LSC activity It is demonstrated that the catalytic p110 lower case delta subunit of Phosphoinositide 3 kinase PI3K which is constitutively activated and drives proliferation in human AML blasts is dispensable for de novo leukemogenesis and LSC activity in AML driven by retroviral transfer of MLL AF9 or HoxA9 Meis1 H9M oncogenes into early hematopoietic progenitors Finally the LSC in H9M AML are identified Surprisingly multiple phenotypic compartments were equally enriched for LSC activity This was also the case when LSC activity in MLL AF9 driven AML was assessed Putative genetic LSC maintenance signatures for each model were also identified There was both overlap and stark contrast in cell surface phenotypes of the LSC enriched compartments and the genetic LSC maintenance signatures in these closely related leukemias These data suggest that like normal hematopoiesis a hierarchy does exist in which self renewing cells give rise to terminally differentiated progeny However unlike HSC activity which can be isolated to a single compartment by cell surface phenotype that is commonly regulated between individuals LSC activity is a cell state that can be independent of surface phenotype and with context specific regulatory mechanisms Biomedical Index to PHS-supported Research ,1990 The Role of Hematopoietic Progenitors in Immune Regulation and Memory Flora Zavala,César Nombela Arrieta,Paolo Fiorina,Moufida Ben Nasr,2022-01-07 Theory of Hematopoiesis

Control A.M. Dygai,V.V. Zhdanov,2014-09-16 This monograph summarizes the large amount of experimental data accumulated during many years of studying the functions of the blood system and its regulatory mechanisms under the action of diverse morbid factors within the models of pathological processes e g immobilization stress blood loss inflammation cytostatic and radiation myelosuppressions experimental encephalopathies neuroses and spontaneous leucosis These data are analyzed with the understanding that hematopoietic tissue is an integrated system that can react to the challenges of both the internal and external environments This analysis helped develop the theory of hematopoiesis control describing the regularities in the work of basic subdivisions of the hematopoietic tissue under normal and pathological conditions as well as the performance and interaction of the local and long ranged control systems The monograph is recommended for Physiologists Pathophysiologists Hematologists Oncologists Pharmacologists and other professionals

Hematopoiesis or the process of blood formation has been extensively studied at both basic and clinical levels Human diseases such as thalassemia immunodeficiency and leukemia represent defects in this process Approaches to treat these disorders have required a basic understanding of the biology of blood cells For instance hemapoietic stem cell replacement or bone marrow transplantation has been used to ameliorate disease This volume focuses on hematopoiesis at a cellular and molecular level and establishes the basis for clinical manipulation of hematopoietic cells for therapeutic benefit In Part I the cellular characteristics of progenitors and stem cells are explored Emphasis is placed on purification of stem cells and both in vitro and in vivo assays The regulation of normal and leukemis stem cells is illustrated An excellent discussion of potential use of these cells for gene therapy concludes this section Hemapoiesis is easily studied during embryogenesis Part II develops the concept of the waves of hemapoiesis during development Comparative hematology is making a major comeback as a field in the 1990 s One hope is that general principles of hematopoiesis will be established by studying many models and systems Part III delves into critical factors that regulate hematopoiesis including both intracellular and extracellular signals

Part IV and V describe lineage programs for myeloid and lymphoid lineages. These chapters are meant to be illustrative of the different cell fates but are not exhaustive. Part VI examines the genetics of hematopoiesis particularly in animal models. The hematopoietic system is in constant contact with stromal cells and endothelial cells during development and in the adult. Evidence suggests that endothelial cells and blood cells may arise from a common progenitor, the hemangioblast. Part VII and VIII discuss the stromal and endothelial cells with the emphasis on their interaction with hematopoietic cells. Molecular

Basis of Hematopoiesis Amittha Wickrema, Barbara Kee, 2008-12-26. Although much is known with respect to blood cell formation and function, many new concepts in the areas of the regulation of hematopoietic stem cell commitment and the subsequent survival, proliferation, and differentiation of progenitors have been elucidated in the last five years. Our understanding of the microenvironment where stem cells reside and commit to distinct blood types, the niche, has grown significantly in recent years. Furthermore, blood cells have been used as the key model system to study microRNA function and the role of microRNAs in the transformation of normal cells into cancer cells. The current volume, Molecular Basis of Hematopoiesis, edited by Amittha Wickrema and Barbara Kee, provides the most recent developments in the area. In addition to a chapter on the utilization of basic science knowledge for the treatment of blood diseases, each chapter in this book has been written and edited by faculty in major academic and research institutions around the world who are pushing the frontiers of research in this important area. , 1970 The Regulation of Hematopoiesis by Stromal Cells Jonas Renström, 2010 Extrinsic Regulation of Hematopoietic Stem Cells in Health and Disease Matthew Decker, 2018. Hematopoietic stem cells facilitate lifelong production of a diverse repertoire of functional mature blood cells. They are a critical biological reservoir that enable organisms to endure physiological challenges such as inflammation, disease, and age. The functional maintenance of hematopoietic stem cells depends not only on intrinsic cell pathways but also on extrinsic cues that guide core behaviors like homing and self renewal Careful study of these extrinsic regulatory networks can deepen our appreciation of fundamental stem cell biology and motivate therapeutic approaches to treat hematologic disease Here I show how derangement of the bone marrow regulatory environment perturbs normal hematopoiesis and demonstrate the dependence of hematopoietic stem cells on a circulating endocrine factor
