exempla of four moments in the reign of Elizabeth I which suggest an increasingly complex interaction between events and texts developing in the last half of the sixteenth century Logan argues that in representing England's recent and distant past a wide range of social subjects engaged in a struggle for intellectual credibility and social viability and in the process generated a contingent public sphere within which history framed as a coherent narrative shaped by causal relationships was brought to bear on the concerns of the Elizabethan present and future Assessing how these chronicles short prose histories and historical dramas each made use of the materials and techniques of the others blurring the distinctions between historiography and poetry as well as between past and present Logan considers the conjunctions between the development of new genres and perceptions about inscription and experience and changing socioeconomic institutions and practices

ENGLISH HISTORICAL REVIEW Diarmaid MacCulloch Church Papist was a nickname a term of abuse for those English Catholics who outwardly conformed to the established Protestant Church and yet inwardly remained Roman Catholics The more dramatic stance of recusancy has drawn historians attention away from this sizeable if statistically indefinable proportion of Church of England congregations but its existence and significance is here clearly revealed through contemporary records challenging the sectarian model of post Reformation Catholicism perpetuated by previous historians Alexandra Walsham explores the aggressive reaction of counter Reformation clergy to the compromising conduct of church papists and the threat they posed to Catholicism's separatist image alongside this she explains why parish priests simultaneously condoned qualified conformity This scholarly and original study thus draws into focus contemporary clerical apprehensions and anxieties as well as the tensions caused by the shifting theological temper of the late Elizabethan and early Stuart church
