Roman Glass Reflections On Cultural Change:

Roman Glass Stuart J. Fleming, 1999 Follow the way social attitudes and historical events among them slavery and materialism wars and plagues influenced how glassworking developed in the Roman world from the mid first century B C to the late sixth century A D Woven into this story is the place of glassware in Roman everyday life from the lady of the house s cosmetic preparations each morning to the setting of table for the evening meal Included are two special appendices one considers the technology of ancient glassmaking the other summarizes ancient opinions on the properties and merits of glass

The Cambridge Economic History of the Greco-Roman World Walter Scheidel, Ian Morris, Richard P.

Saller, 2007-11-29 In this the first comprehensive survey of the economies of classical antiquity twenty eight chapters summarise the current state of scholarship in their specialised fields and sketch new directions for research They reflect a new interest in economic growth in antiquity and develop new methods for measuring economic development often combining textual and archaeological data that have previously been treated separately Roman Glass Stuart J.

Fleming, 1997-01-29 This lavishly illustrated book places glass in its social setting within the Roman household The volume was written to accompany the traveling exhibition Roman Glass Reflections on Cultural Change Through a series of vignettes the author tells the story of the development of the glass industry in the Roman Empire and the role of glass in the daily routines of the ancient Romans During the reign of Rome s first emperor Augustus 27 B C A D 14 as several well established industries such as pottery and textile making were being expanded the craft of glassmaking was adopted from the East turned into an industry and adapted to Roman taste By the mid first century A D glass rivaled pottery in the domestic marketplace It was used for tableware and storage containers to hold everything from preserved fish to fine perfumes Glass featured strongly in the Roman daily routine from the early morning when maids would apply perfumed lotions to their mistress in preparation for her social rounds to the late afternoon when slaves would bring platters of food bowls of fruit and jugs of wine all of glass to the supper table And there was a place for glass even in Roman funerary ritual because it was custom to include all manner of domestic items among the grave furnishings to add comfort to the afterlife Roman Glass

Stuart James Fleming, 1999 Drawing analogies between the Roman society and our own Fleming U of Pennsylvania Museum presents the path of development followed by the Roman glassworking industry and illustrates the aesthetic and technical response of an industry to changes in personal taste Where written sources were lacking he uses images such as manuscripts and mosaics relief decoration on silverware and coffins and so forth In the foreword he states that when he talks of glass reflecting the Roman culture he means that it reflects the way people behaved towards one another Contains many color illustrations Annotation copyrighted by Book News Inc Portland OR Glass of the Roman World Justine Bayley, Ian Freestone, Caroline Jackson, 2015-07-31 Glass of the Roman World illustrates the arrival of new cultural systems mechanisms of trade and an expanded economic base in the early 1st millennium AD which in combination allowed the further development of the existing glass industry Glass became something which encompassed more than simply a novel and highly decorative material Glass production grew and its consumption increased until it was assimilated into all levels of society used for display and luxury items but equally for utilitarian containers windows and even tools These 18 papers by renowned international scholars include studies of glass from Europe and the Near East The authors write on a variety of topics where their work is at the forefront of new approaches to the subject They both extend and consolidate aspects of our understanding of how glass was produced traded and used throughout the Empire and the wider world drawing on chronology typology patterns of distribution and other methodologies including the incorporation of new scientific methods Though focusing on a single material the papers are firmly based in its archaeological context in the wider economy of the Roman world and consider glass as part of a complex material culture controlled by the expansion and contraction of the Empire The volume is presented in honor of Jenny Price a foremost scholar of Roman glass

Making Senses of the Past

Jo Day, 2013-03-19 Since the nineteenth century museums have kept their artifacts in glass cases to better preserve them and drawings and photographs have become standard ways of presenting the past These practices have led to an archaeology dominated by visual description even though human interaction with the surrounding world involves the whole body and all of its senses In the past few years sensory archaeology has become more prominent and Making Senses of the Past is one of the first collected volumes on this subject This book presents cutting edge research on new theoretical issues The essays presented here take readers on a multisensory journey around the world and across time In ancient Peru a site provides sensory surprises as voices resound beneath the ground and hidden carvings slowly reveal their secrets In Canada and New Zealand the flicker of reflected light from a lake dances on the faces of painted rocks and may have influenced when and why the pigment was applied In Mesopotamia vessels for foodstuffs build a picture of a past cuisine that encompasses taste and social activity in the building of communities While perfume and flowers are examined in various cultures in the chamber tombs of ancient Roman Palestine we are reminded that not all smells are pleasant Making Senses of the Past explores alternative ways to perceive past societies and offers a new way of wiring archaeology that incorporates the senses
