Ignatova, 2021-05-20

Genetically modified crops have become a key element of development strategies across the Global South despite remaining deeply controversial. Proponents hail them as an example of pro-poor innovation while critics regard them as a threat to food sovereignty and the environment. The promotion of biotechnology is an integral part of the new Green Revolution for Africa, interventions and is also intimately linked to the rise of philanthrocapitalism which advances business solutions to address the problem of poverty. Through interviews with farmers, policymakers and agricultural scientists, Jacqueline Ignatova shows how efforts to transform the seed sector in northern Ghana, one of the key laboratories of this new Green Revolution, may serve to exacerbate the inequality it was notionally intended to address. But she also argues that its effects in Ghana have been far more complex than either side of the debate has acknowledged, with local farmers proving adept at blending traditional and modern agricultural methods that subvert the interests of global agribusiness.

The World System as Unit of Analysis Roberto Patricio Korzeniewicz, 2017-09-22. World system analyses have recast the study of between and within nation-country inequality as constituent aspects of a single field of inquiry, the study of inequality and social stratification as processes that always have been global in their very essence. World system analyses maintain that global social stratification pivots around institutional arrangements that render distributional outcomes as simultaneously national, gendered, racialized, and global processes. This book takes stock of some of the enduring theoretical and empirical contributions of a world system perspective and identifies promising directions for future inquiry and discussion. Some chapters reassess the scope and methodologies of world system analysis around several key problems, e.g. the spatial and temporal boundaries of global commodity chains, the construction and challenge of various dimensions of social inequality, systemic and antisystemic social movements. Others take stock of areas in which world systems are promoting methodological innovation and/or generating useful global data and identify questions that demand additional methodological and empirical attention for future research. In different ways, this book helps us to critically reconsider some of the enduring legacies within a world system perspective, such as Karl Polanyi's concept of the double movement or the distinction drawn by Giovanni Arrighi or Immanuel Wallerstein between systemic and antisystemic movements. As argued by many of the authors in this book, a world historical approach calls for greater sensitivity to the manifold ways in which conceptual boundaries change over time and space. Taking seriously the issue of unit of analysis, this book explores critically productive ways for better understanding global patterns of continuity and change.

Feminist Political Ecology and the Economics of Care Christine Bauhardt, Wendy Harcourt, 2018-12-07. This book envisages a different form of our economies where care work and care-full relationships are central to social and cultural life. It sets out a feminist vision of a caring economy and asks what needs to change economically and ecologically in our conceptual approaches and our daily lives as we learn to care for each other and non-human others. Bringing together authors from 11 countries, also representing institutions from 8 countries, this edited collection sets out the challenges for gender-aware economies based on an ethics of care for people and the environment in an original and engaging way The book aims to break down the assumed inseparability of economic growth and social prosperity and natural resource exploitation while not romanticising social material relations to nature The authors explore diverse understandings of care through a range of analytical approaches contexts and case studies and pays particular attention to the complicated nexus between re productivity nature womanhood and care It includes strong contributions on community economies everyday practices of care the politics of place and care of non human others as well as an engagement on concepts such as wealth sustainability food sovereignty body politics naturecultures and technoscience Feminist Political Ecology and the Economics of Care is aimed at all those interested in what feminist theory and practice brings to today s major political economic and environmental debates around sustainability alternatives to economic development and gender power relations

Agronomy for Development James Sumberg, 2017-07-06 Over the last decade there has been renewed interest in food security and the state of the global food system Population growth climate change and food price spikes have combined to focus new attention on the technologies and institutions that underpin the production and consumption of food that is varied nutritious and safe Knowledge politics within development oriented agronomy set the stage for some models of agricultural development to be favoured over others with very real implications for the food security and wellbeing of many millions of people Agronomy for Development demonstrates how the analysis of knowledge politics can shed valuable new light on current debates about agricultural development and food security Using bio physical and social sciences perspectives to address the political economy of the production and use of knowledge in development this edited collection reflects on the changing politics of knowledge within the field of agronomy and the ways in which these politics feed and reflect the interests of a broad set of actors This book is aimed at professionals working in agricultural research as well as students and practitioners of agricultural rural and international development
