

SELF-REFERENTIALITY/ SELF-CONSCIOUSNESS:

- Being a literary critic and a novelist, Coetzee is conscious of the boundary between fiction and reality and acknowledge the strong reciprocal influence between them, which seem increasingly inseparable in Foe.
- A simple explanation of this inseparability (in Foe) is that the role of the narrator and the critic is often fulfilled by the same person, Susan Barton. In section II, she argues:

Through self-exploration, Susan criticizes her narratorial function, assuming that her story is no longer hers and that someone else (another narratorial force) is directing her. Even more, she discredits her very existence by calling into question which "order" she belongs to: the real or the fictional realm.

"In the beginning I thought I would tell you the story of the island and everything done with that, relevant to my former life. But now all my life grows to be story and there is nothing of my own left to me. I thought I was myself and this got a creature from another order speaking words you made up for her. But now I am full of doubt. I am doubt itself. Who is speaking me? Am I a phantom too? To what order do I belong? And you who are you?" (Coetzee 121)

Seeing And Saying Selfreferentiality In British And American Literature:

Seeing and Saying Detlev Gohrbandt, Bruno von Lutz, 1998 Transcultural English Studies Frank Schulze-Engler, Sissy Helff, 2009 What is most strikingly new about the transcultural is its sudden ubiquity Following in the wake of previous concepts in cultural and literary studies such as creolization hybridity and syncretism and signalling a family relationship to terms such as transnationality translocality and transmigration transcultural terminology has unobtrusively but powerfully edged its way into contemporary theoretical and critical discourse The four sections of this volume denote major areas where transcultural questions and problematics have come to the fore theories of culture and literature that have sought to account for the complexity of culture in a world increasingly characterized by globalization transnationalization and interdependence realities of individual and collective life worlds shaped by the ubiquity of phenomena and experiences relating to transnational connections and the blurring of cultural boundaries fictions in literature and other media that explore these realities negotiate the fuzzy edges of ethnic or national cultures and participate in the creation of transnational public spheres as well as transcultural imaginations and memories and finally pedagogy and didactics where earlier models of teaching other cultures are faced with the challenge of coming to terms with cultural complexity both in what is being taught and in the people it is taught to and where target cultures have become elusive The idea of locating culture and literature exclusively in the context of ethnicities or nations is rapidly losing plausibility throughout an English speaking world that has long since been multi rather than monolingual Exploring the prospects and contours of Transcultural English Studies thus reflects a set of common challenges and predicaments that in recent years have increasingly moved centre stage not only in the New Literatures in English but also in British and American studies
