infant years of the development of valuation techniques two schools of thought emerged the revealed preference school and the stated preference school the latter of which is perhaps most associated with the contingent valuation method In the midst of this debate an exciting new approach to non market valuation was developed in the 1990s a combination and joint estimation of revealed preference and stated preference data There are two primary objectives for this book One objective is to fill a gap in the nonmarket valuation primer literature A number of books have appeared over the past decade that develop the theory and methods of nonmarket valuation but each takes an individual nonmarket valuation method approach This book considers each of these valuation methods in combination with another method These relationships can be exploited econometrically to obtain more valid and reliable estimates of willingness to pay relative to the individual methods The second objective is to showcase recent and novel applications of data combination and joint estimation via a set of original state of the art studies that are contributed by leading researchers in the field This book will be accessible to economists and consultants working in business or government as well as an invaluable resource for researchers and students alike
