

ABOUT THE BOOK -

This book sets out to describe how Derbyshire's Celtic population and a Roman army of mercenaries lived side-by-side for three centuries. The Romans with care little for Britain and less for its people, came to Derbyshire to find and claim their 'Woods of Victory'. The price the subdued Celts paid was enormous as they were compelled to tear from their native earth every last ounce of mineral wealth to replenish the gaping coffers of Rome.

Then sixteen centuries ago, the Romans marched away. John Anderson calls on the evidence they left behind to tell the fascinating story of those rigorous and turbulent times in the county's history.

ABOUT THE AUTHOR -

When the author first came to Derbyshire as a professional social worker he intended to stay five years. In real career he changed track, took a Degree in Education and twenty-five years after arriving thinks he might settle here.

He lives inelper with his French born wife and grown up family. Most of his interests are shared with his wife and they get a lot of pleasure from romancing around the county and further afield.

John Anderson has a penchant for good red wines of Burgundy and Cotes du Rhone, Camembert cheese and fresh French bread.
