Sectoral Growth in Chile, 1962-82 Juan Eduardo Coeymans, Yair Mundlak, 1993 The model Productivity Labor Capital Product prices Simulations of changes in relative prices Simulations of growth Patterns of change in Malawi's economy under sector-focused investment strategies: Results of scenarios run through 2030 using an economy-wide model for Malawi Benson, Todd, Hartley, Faaiga, 2020-01-23 Malawi's economic future is dependent upon a transformation of the economy that will involve increased economic productivity overall and considerable movement of labor and capital out of agriculture and into manufacturing and services A dynamic Computable General Equilibrium model of the economy of Malawi was used to better understand the development gains that would be realized by 2030 through significantly increasing separately the productivity of each of the three sectors of the Malawian economy agriculture industry and services The scenarios run in the model involved increasing by 20 percent from current levels the annual growth rate in total factor productivity for each of the three sectors The results show important trade offs in the choice of which sector should receive emphasis in any economic development strategy A services led strategy would result in higher economic growth overall and broadly rising incomes contributing the most to a structural transformation of the Malawi economy However the principal beneficiaries of increased investment to improve productivity in the services sector will be better off households In contrast an agriculture focused strategy would better meet the needs of the poor and their access to food but would result in continued lagging growth for Malawi's economy and many poorer households continuing to be unable to obtain sufficient income to exit their poverty and realize much better lives for themselves and their children The industrial sector currently is much smaller than either the agriculture or services sectors particularly in terms of employment so significant increases in productivity growth in industry results in smaller benefits overall than comparable increases in agriculture or services Structural Change and

South-South Globalization S. Mansoob Murshed, Pedro Goulart, Leandro Serino, 2011-06-16 Two prominent features of the current global economy are the world wide recession brought about by the recent financial crisis and the emergence of major economic powers from within the developing world such as Brazil China and India The former represents the failure of global regulatory policies and macroeconomic imbalances between surplus and deficit countries the latter is symptomatic of a partial shift in economic power towards developing nations who are often collectively labelled the global South The macroeconomic imbalances are unsustainable in the longer run as they mean greater absorption relative to income in deficit nations they require corrective action and international policy coordination Reducing imbalances also requires large developing countries to raise their domestic consumption and also imports from the rest of the world and international financial institutions to operate as a lender of last resort Furthermore the engines of global growth especially for developing countries may no longer lie solely in the traditional developed country markets in the USA Europe and Japan known collectively as the global North Rather South South trade is growing rapidly and that could be an engine of growth for the global economy including both developed and developing countries The various chapters in this edited volume address issues surrounding global imbalances and the prospects for growth in developing countries propelled by South South interaction This book should be of interest to students and researchers focussing on political economics international economics globalization global imbalance and the world wide recession after 2008
