Shells Of New Guinea And The Central Indo Pacific:

Shells of New Guinea and the Central Indo-Pacific Alan G. Hinton, 1975 The Mollusks Charles F. Sturm, Timothy A. Pearce, Ángel Valdés, 2006 Mollusks have been important to humans since our earliest days Initially when humans were primarily interested in what they could eat or use mollusks were important as food ornaments and materials for tools Over the centuries as human knowledge branched out and individuals started to study the world around them mollusks were important subjects for learning how things worked In this volume the editors and contributors have brought together a broad range of topics within the field of malacology It is our expectation that these topics will be of interest and use to amateur and professional malacologists

The Living Marine Resources of the Western Central Pacific: Seaweeds, corals, bivalves and gastropods (1998) Kent E. Carpenter, Volker H. Niem, 1998 Archaeological Research at Caution Bay, Papua New Guinea Thomas Richards, Bruno David, Ken Aplin, 2016-12-31 The first volume of the Caution Bay monographs is designed to introduce the goals of the Caution Bay project the nature and scope of the investigations and the cultural and natural setting of the study area Conservation and Development in Irian Jaya Ronald Petocz, 2023-07-24 Forts and Fortification in Wallacea Sue O'Connor, Andrew McWilliam, Sally Brockwell, 2020-09-07 This volume presents ground breaking research on fortified sites in three parts of Wallacea by a highly regarded group of scholars from Australia Europe Southeast Asia and the United States In addition to surveying and dating defensive sites in often remote and difficult terrain the chapters provide an important and scholarly set of archaeological and ethnohistoric studies that investigate the origin of forts in Wallacea Socio political instability from climate events the materialisation of indigenous belief systems and the substantial impact of imperial expansion and European colonialism are examined and comprise a significant addition to our knowledge of conflict and warfare in an under studied part of the Indo Pacific The archaeological record for past conflict is frequently ambiguous and the contribution of warfare to social development is mired in debate and paradox Authors demonstrate that forts and other defensive constructions are costly and complicated structures that while designed and built to protect a community from a threat of imminent violence had and have complicated life histories as a result of their architectural permanence strategic locations and traditional cultural and political significance Understanding why conflict outbreaks like human colonisation often appear in the past as a punctuated event can best be approached through long term records of conflict and violence involving archaeology and allied historical disciplines as has been successfully done here The volume is essential reading for archaeologists cultural heritage managers and those with an interest in conflict studies

contextualised by the editors introductory and concluding chapters These scholars and the others involved in the work really know their stuff and it shows The editors connect the preoccupations of Pacific archaeologists with those of their colleagues working in other island regions and on big questions of colonisation migration interaction and patterns and processes of cultural change in hitherto uninhabited environments These sorts of outward looking big picture contextual studies are invaluable but all too often are missing from locally and regionally oriented writing very much to its detriment In sum the work strongly advances our understanding of the early prehistory of Fiji through its well integrated combination of original research and the reinterpretation of existing knowledge in the context of wider theoretical and historical concerns In doing so The Early Prehistory of Fiji makes a truly substantial contribution to Pacific and archaeological scholarship Professor Ian Lilley The University of Queensland Catalog of the South Pacific Collection University of California, Santa Cruz.
