

What is pacifism?

Pacifism is the belief that violence and fighting can never be right, and that all problems should be solved by peaceful means. Many of the early Christians were pacifists and refused to fight, and some modern-day Christians hold the same view.

For example, the church known as the Quakers (or the Society of Friends) believe that non-violent confrontation of evil and peaceful reconciliation are always superior to violent measures. This was expressed in one of their earliest writings, from just after the time of the English Civil War, in which they had not been prepared to fight for either side, which you can read on the next slide.
