The Cognitive Neuropsychology of Language (Psychology Revivals) Max Coltheart, Giuseppe Sartori, Remo Job, 2013-12-19 Damage to the brain can impair language in many different ways severely harming some linguistic functions whilst sparing others To achieve some understanding of the apparently bewildering diversity of language disorders it is necessary to interpret impaired linguistic performance by relating it to a model of normal linguistic performance Originally published in 1987 this book describes the application of such models of normal language processing to the interpretation of a wide variety of linguistic disorders It deals with both the production and the comprehension of language with language at both the sentence and the single word level with written as well as with spoken language and with acquired as well as with developmental disorders Princeton University Library Classification System, 1900-1920 Ernest Cushing Richardson, 1929

The Handbook of Psycholinguistic and Cognitive Processes Jackie Guendouzi, Filip Loncke, Mandy J. Williams, 2011-01-07. This handbook includes an overview of those areas of cognition and language processing that are relevant to the field of communication disorders and provides examples of theoretical approaches to problems and issues in communication disorders. The first section includes a collection of chapters that outline some of the basic considerations and areas of cognition and language that underlie communication processing. A second section explains and exemplifies some of the influential theories of psycholinguistic cognitive processing and the third section illustrates theoretical applications to clinical populations. There is coverage of theories that have been either seminal or controversial in the research of communication disorders. Given the increasing multi-cultural workload of many practitioners working with clinical populations, chapters relating to bilingual populations are also included. The volume book provides a single interdisciplinary source where researchers and students can access information on psycholinguistic and cognitive processing theories relevant to clinical populations. A range of theories, models and perspectives are provided. The range of topics and issues illustrate the relevance of a dynamic interaction between theoretical and applied work and retains the complexity of psycholinguistic and cognitive theory for readers both researchers and graduate students whose primary interest is the field of communication disorders.

Cognitive Biases in Anxiety and Depression Paula Hertel, 2002. This special issue of Cognition and Emotion is dedicated to the phenomena of emotion-related biases in attention and remembering that are experienced by anxious and depressed people. Andrew Mathews and Colin MacLeod summarize their new research in using experimental methods to train anxiety-like biases in attention and interpretation. Elaine Fox, Riccardo Russo and Kevin Dutton report new experiments concerning delayed disengagement from threatening events in anxiety. Phil Watkins's article addresses the conditions for obtaining depression-related biases on indirect tests of memory. Depression-consistent biases in false recognition are reported by Rich Wenzlaff, Jo Meier and Danette Salas; these biases also characterized performance by previously dysphoric students and suggest indirect measures of vulnerability to depression Prospective evidence that cognitive biases index vulnerability is described by Stephanie Rude and her colleagues In short the special issue contains a mixture of new findings with integrative review and suggestions for future directions in investigations of emotionally disordered cognition
