

The background is a classical religious painting. It depicts St. Paul, identifiable by a halo, wearing a green tunic and a red cloak. He is shown from the waist up, gesturing with both hands raised towards a group of people. The setting appears to be an interior with architectural elements like columns and arches. In the lower right, the heads and shoulders of several listeners are visible, looking towards Paul. The overall style is reminiscent of Renaissance or Baroque religious art.

B. A. Asiedu,2019-11-20 Paul the apostle and historian Flavius Josephus spent considerable parts of their careers away from Jerusalem They cultivated Roman audiences under very different circumstances Paul with his Letter to the Romans and Josephus with the writings he produced in Rome after the Jewish War Curiously Paul's last visit to Jerusalem coincided with Josephus's entry into public life a period about which Josephus is deliberately silent In Paul and His Letters Thinking with Josephus F B A Asiedu selects themes from Josephus's life to explore Paul's letters and biography that contribute to his uniqueness in Jewish history He highlights for example the need to read Romans 9:11 as aporetic discourse to appreciate Paul as an existential thinker Asiedu considers among other things the authenticity of Paul's letters and offers an alternative to the prevailing scholarly consensus He also maintains that the Pauline collection in the New Testament first took shape in the house of Gaius in Corinth where Paul composed his Letter to the Romans Asiedu also suggests that the traditional view that Luke the physician wrote the Acts of the Apostles is probably a mistake He argues that Titus the Greek the coworker and friend of Barnabas and Paul most likely authored it      The Book of Acts C. T. Johnson,2022-08-11 Very little work has been done on the function of example as a rhetorical induction in the New Testament This lacuna in scholarship is particularly striking given Paul s personal rhetorical examples in his Letter to the Galatians In Induction and Example C T Johnson therefore addresses a much needed area of Pauline research Johnson first constructs a methodology to assist readers in interpreting and identifying Aristotle s induction and the rhetorical example and then using this methodology he focuses on Paul s personal and rhetorical examples to get at the truth of the gospel in the letter to the Galatians The monograph defines and describes two aspects of induction observation and experience and how they function in the biblical text especially how individuals arrive at their inductive conclusions Further still Johnson describes how the various types of example historical recent personal and analogical are used as rhetorical devices to persuade a person or community to embrace or reject a particular position in the future Induction and Example is essential reading not only for scholars and students of New Testament rhetoric but also for anyone interested in the ways in which the apostle Paul communicated personally and persuasively to the early churches under his influence      Slave of Christ Murray J.
