Restoring U.S. Leadership in Nuclear Energy The CSIS Commission on Nuclear Energy Policy in the United States, 2013-07-03 America's nuclear energy industry is in decline Low natural gas prices financing hurdles failure to find a permanent repository for high level nuclear waste reactions to the Fukushima accident in Japan and other factors are hastening the day when existing U S reactors become uneconomic The decline of the U S nuclear energy industry could be much more rapid than policy makers and stakeholders anticipate China India Russia and others plan on adding nuclear technology to their mix furthering the spread of nuclear materials around the globe U S companies must meet a significant share of this demand for nuclear technology but U S firms are currently at a competitive disadvantage due to restrictive and otherwise unsupportive export policies Without a strong commercial presence in new markets America's ability to influence nonproliferation policies and nuclear safety behaviors worldwide is bound to diminish The United States cannot afford to become irrelevant in a new nuclear age

Energy Abstracts for Policy Analysis ,1977 Nuclear Weapons in the Information Age Stephen J.

Cimbala,2012-02-02 In today's information age the coexistence of nuclear weapons with advanced conventional weapons and information based concepts of warfare is a military contradiction Nuclear deterrence was initially predicated on geopolitical military and technical assumptions These were based on Cold War politics rational deterrence theory the concept of mutual vulnerability and the fact that information and technology diffusion were limited Today however far from being obsolete nuclear and other weapons of mass destruction have not only survived but have become weapons for states that face security threats including perceived threats of nuclear blackmail or expectation of conflicts This study focuses on this unplanned coexistence of two distinct arts of war including the possibility that states like the U S may be held hostage to nuclear blackmail by outlier regimes or terrorists such as North Korea It shows that restricting nuclear proliferation should still be on the agenda of policymakers and calls for a revitalized global nonproliferation regime This unique survey by a leading expert will appeal to anyone interested in arms control nuclear proliferation and defense policy Human Radiation

Congress. Senate. Committee on Governmental Affairs,1996 Nuclear Fictions Michael Gardiner,2024-11-30 In this book Michael Gardiner suggests that the conception of the war ending weapon was tied up with a longer commitment to unified space and singular progress The mission for total weapons can be seen rising with the highly technical defensive war of the later nineteenth century and passing through twentieth century atomic research then the targeting of the outsides of commercial empire and the post war consensus with deterrence as its foundation The end of the Cold War brought an opportunity to fully naturalise deterrence but also brought a tacit acceptance of nuclear violence while forms of violence against the individual were rigorously sought out If the world unifying role of deterrence has always been undermined by the rise of rival empires it has also been questioned by critical communities including the consensus sceptics of the 1950s 60s 1980s 90s Nuclear Criticism and readers of nuclear ism millennial campaigns for Scottish independence and twenty first century descriptions of nuclear colonialism Recently it has become more obvious that an Anglosphere concept of worldly deterrence was bound to a singular and ultimately nihilistic idea of progress bio Michael Gardiner is Professor in the Department of English and Comparative Literature at the University of Warwick
