Crusading and Chronicle Writing on the Medieval Baltic Frontier Marek Tamm, Linda Kaljundi, Carsten Selch Jensen, 2016-04-22 The Chronicle of Henry of Livonia written by a missionary priest in the early thirteenth century to record the history of the crusades to Livonia and Estonia around 1186-1227 offers one of the most vivid examples of the early thirteenth century crusading ideology in practice Step by step it has become one of the most widely read and acknowledged frontier crusading and missionary chronicles Henry's chronicle offers many opportunities to test and broaden the new approaches and key concepts brought along by recent developments in medieval studies including the new pluralist definition of crusading and the relationship between the peripheries and core areas of Europe While recent years have produced a significant amount of new research into Henry of Livonia much of it has been limited to particular historical traditions and languages A key objective of this book therefore is to synthesise the current state of research for the international scholarly audience The volume provides a multi-sided and multi-disciplinary companion to the chronicle and is divided into three parts The first part Representations brings into focus the imaginary sphere of the chronicle the various images brought into existence by the amalgamation of crusading and missionary ideology and the frontier experience This is followed by studies on Practices which examines the chronicle's reflections of the diplomatic religious and military practices of the Christianisation and colonisation processes in medieval Livonia The volume concludes with a section on the Appropriations which maps the reception history of the chronicle the dynamics of the medieval early modern and modern national uses and abuses of the text The American Magazine and Historical Chronicle, 1987 *The Works of Saint Augustine: Letters v. 1.
