Purchasing For Foodservice:

Purchasing for Foodservice Lynne Nannen Robertson, 1994-03-31 Teaches accounting methods and knowledge of product specifications necessary for successful foodservice operation In this time of high costs administrators are looking at every possible way to economize without adversely affecting foodservice quality and the welfare of those served Purchasing techniques can be very useful in maximizing the resources of the dietary department This book will assist you in learning accounting procedures and product specifications that will be needed by the competent purchaser in performing the duties necessary to provide optimum purchasing decisions basic to a successful foodservice operation The foods included are those used in most foodservice departments No attempt has been made to cover all foods available Useful for any level written to be understood by all The book has been organized to simplify a rather complex subject It is hoped that this information will serve as a tool for making improvements in the purchasing function of foodservice departments How Much to Buy Robert A. Ulm, 1994 Shows how to purchase for the requirements of a business in the most common menu situations Focuses on how to determine quantities needed and how to physically carry out the act of purchasing Discusses menu types methods of gathering history and the refined status of food supplies needed Also discusses various methods of forecasting adjustments that need to be made to the forecast and how to call in an order Team Nutrition Presents a Guide for Purchasing Food Service Equipment, 1999 Discusses how to purchase conventional foodservice production equipment using a decision making process and critical pathway approach Each chapter covers a different phase of the process industry trends project planning specification development the bid process the receiving process alternate purchasing strategies etc

Purchasing for Food Service Lynne Nannen Robertson, 1985 This book is designed to teach accounting procedures and product specifications that are needed by the competent purchaser in order to make optimum purchasing decisions basic to a successful food service operation It may be used by any level of food service personnel that is involved with any phase of the purchasing process Preferably the book should be used with the guidance and direction of a dietitian or instructor but any interested employee working alone should benefit from the information The self instruction technique presents information in brief easy steps As new products are introduced they are explained Comprehension is tested by fill in questions with answers These topics are covered the philosophy of purchasing accounting procedures beef pork lamb fish and seafood poultry eggs dairy products and alternatives cheese fresh fruits canned frozen and dried fruits fresh vegetables canned frozen and dried vegetables cereal products spices herbs and flavorings sweetening agents beverages and receiving and storage YLB

Foodservice Procurement Marian C. Spears, 1999 The approach of this user friendly text is to provide undergraduate students in a commercial or noncommercial foodservice curriculum with the understanding that procurement which includes purchasing receiving storage and inventory control is the first step in preparing menu items that satisfy customers With an emphasis placed on being updated and informed about products students will learn how to make decisions about which products meet the quality standards required by the customer and at the same time find the lowest price for a product Unlike any other text on the market this book advocates that purchasing is not a cost center in the operation as it was for many years but that it contributes to the profit and every dollar saved is a dollar profit
