The Symbolic Earth James G. Cantrill,Christine L. Oravec,2021-10-21 The core dilemma in environmental advocacy may be illustrated by the question When we communicate about the world should we stress what we know or what we feel The contributors to The Symbolic Earth argue that it is more important to decide how we should talk about what we know and feel In their view the environment is largely a product of how we talk about the world Because the environment is a social construction the only hope we have of preserving it is to understand and alter the fundamental ways we discuss it This collection first examines the ways in which discourse creates environment perceptions Subjects discussed range from the description of natural scenery to the advocacy of political interest groups from the everyday interactions of citizens facing environmental crises to the greenwashing of corporate imagemakers and from the psychology of the mass public to the social constructions of the mass media The authors include nationally known scholars of environmental history rhetorical theory ethnography communication and journalism studies public policy and media criticism formation of public opinion and the scholarly debates about social problems Does the perception of injustice force problems to appear on the political agenda Does the perception of an injustice give momentum to social change Or are violations of self interest or threats to one's material welfare the more important factors Or are empathy driven concerns for the needy and the disadvantaged motivations to solve societal problems What is known about the role justice concerns play in leadership In several chapters of this volume justice concerns and justice motives are viewed in relation to other concerns and motivations welfare self interest altruism It is argued that the consensus of political theorists converges on mutual advantage as the main criterion of acceptable solutions to solving societal problems In economics self interest is considered the driving force and provides the criterion of acceptable solutions Sociological and social psychological exchange theories share these basic assumptions Thus questions are raised and answered concerning how justice and these other important motives appear in the analyses of societal problems and the search for solutions Moreover in addition to the issue of conflicting motives self interest altruism justice it is commonly recognized that the definition of what is just and what is unjust is open to question In public as well as in scientific dialogues diverging views about justice have to be integrated or decided upon
