

PLATE II

Types of Nucleus (Normal and Barred Spindle)

The sequence of spirals is double, one branch containing some open, the other containing barred spirals. Each branch is subdivided into sections, designated by the subscript, a , b , and c ; to the right of HN , and described as early, intermediate and late, versus of basal spirals. Positions in each branch are determined by the amount of material in the arms relative to that in the nearest regions, by the position of the arms and by the degree of resolution. The early series (S_0 and the NH_a) appear to be closely related to the helical (H) spirals. The NH_b transition from H to SN , is smooth and continuous but that from SN to SN_c may be catastrophic—all known examples of SN_c have fully developed arms.

The complete sequence of regular nebulae, 10 to 3, varies very faintness which vary systematically throughout the entire range. The luminosities (absolute magnitudes) remain approximately constant with the diameters increase and hence surface brightness decreases. The spectral types, and degree of resolution, which characterizes the nebulae type, also changes continuously. The photo system is primarily a late type normal spiral.
