Abstract: In this paper, we investigate the government's optimal subsidy strategy for the China–Europe Railway Express (CERE) considering environmental impacts and industry competition. Specifically, we consider three subsidy options: no subsidies, subsidies to CERE carriers, and subsidies to shippers. A game theory framework is developed to analyze the problem of developing a sustainable supply chain consisting of the government, competitive carriers, and shippers. First of all, we find that for the government, indirect subsidies to CERE carriers and direct subsidies to shippers lead to the same total social welfare. We then examine the conditions for phasing out government subsidies. Our results indicate that the government's optimal subsidy strategy switches at a threshold level of CERE's environmental advantage. In particular, when the environmental advantage of CERE is high, the government should subsidize CERE by subsidizing either the carrier or shipper. In contrast, when the environmental advantage of CERE is low, the government should opt out of subsidies. At last, we find that this threshold of CERE's environmental advantage is further impacted by CERE's capacity and marginal operating costs. This study differs from prior research by investigating various subsidy strategies while taking into account CERE's emission advantage and the timing of subsidy withdrawal.

1. Introduction

The Belt and Road Initiative (B&R) is proposed as a critical strategy to improve connectivity in regional economic cooperation and growth. This initiative comprises two major platforms: the land-based Silk Road Economic Belt (SREB), and the sea-based 21st-Century Maritime Silk Road (MSR). These two platforms facilitate the flow of infrastructure and promote deeper market integration among the countries spanning from China to Europe [1,2]. To further advance this initiative, the China–Europe Railway Express (CERE) has been launched to offer cross-border joint railway freight transport services to countries situated along the Silk Road Economic Belt (SREB) and the 21st-Century Maritime Silk Road (MSR). Since the first CERE train started operating in Chongqing in 2011, CERE has played a vital role in promoting regional economic development along SREB. Currently, there are more than 40,000 CERE freight trains operating between China and Europe. Over 160 cities in 22 European countries have been served by these trains along 73 routes so far [3]. In the future, with further expansion of the CERE network, more and more trade routes will be connected to SREB and MSR. For example, there are two popular trade routes between Yiwu, China and Madrid, Spain: the CERE route and the liner shipping route. The CERE route linking Yiwu and Madrid (i.e., the Yiwu–Xinjiang–Europe cargo train) is the longest train line in the SREB (13,502 km), which carries container freights passing

Governance and Business Models for Sustainable Capitalism Atle Midttun, 2021-12-20 Governance and Business Models for Sustainable Capitalism touches upon many of the central themes of today s debate on business and society In particular it brings attention to a recurrent tension between efficiency innovation and productivity on the one hand and fairness equity and sustainability on the other The book argues that we need radical rethinking of business models and economic governance beyond the classical doctrine which sees social and ecological responsibility as lying with public policy regulation of purely profit seeking firms In spite of the popular CSR agenda business as we know it today is both too transient and too limited in its motivation to carry the regulatory burden We need to adopt a much wider concept of partnered governance where advanced states and pioneering companies work together to raise the social and environmental bar The book suggests that civil engagements based on moral rather than formal rights and amplified through the media may provide a healthy challenge both to autocratic planning and to solely profit centered commercialization The book also proposes a triple cycle theory of innovation for sustainability a novel framing of the efficacy of green and prosocial entrepreneurship as intertwined with political visions and supportive institutions In addition the book offers reflections on the ways in which further digital robotization may enable transition to an Agora Economy where productive efficiency is combined with expanded civic freedoms Aimed primarily at researchers academics and students in the fields of political economy business and society corporate governance business ethics corporate social responsibility and sustainability the book will additionally be of value to practitioners supplying them with information regarding the challenges associated with the shaping of sustainable or civilised market capitalism for a better world

Model Government Charters Roger L. Kemp, 2003-01-01 The United States federal government is the oldest in existence and stands as the chief democratic model in the world However the exact workings of the various levels of the United States government are a mystery to many. Because the basis for each level's operations is the charter that formed it, this volume uses model charters to provide a straightforward explanation of why American governments work. Each chapter covers a different level of government: city, county, regional, state, and federal, and begins with information regarding that government's history, future, types, and organization. Model charters provided at the end of each chapter describe the laws that form the basis of government. The charters are assembled from nationally recognized planning agencies and associations advocating good governmental practices. A glossary of commonly used terms is also provided, as well as a national resource directory which highlights major sources for further research on the topics covered in the chapters.

INDIAN MODELS OF ECONOMY, BUSINESS AND MANAGEMENT KANAGASABAPATHI, P., 2013-03-10. This comprehensive and extensively researched study deals primarily with the economic, business, and management models from the Indian perspectives. The third edition of the book presents updated details, latest data, and new information obtained from authentic sources in order to understand the topics discussed. It provides detailed information collected from field studies undertaken in different industrial and business centres across the country. The details contained in the book have been obtained from various empirical and research studies and reputed national and international sources. The author contends that India remained a strong economic, business, and management power for most of the time in history, and the country has the potential to achieve the premier status even today. He gives a masterly analysis of not only the Indian economic, business, and management models but also the popular economic, business, and management models of the other countries. The author asserts that a paradigm shift in thinking is urgently needed to understand the ground realities and the functioning Indian systems so that the country could be taken forward with the necessary orientation and suitable policies. Intended primarily for the postgraduate students of Management, the book would also be useful to the students of Economics and Commerce, as well as to the professionals interested in the study of the Indian economy, business, and management from the Indian perspectives.
