Response Models Dominique M. Hanssens, Leonard J. Parsons, Randall L. Schultz, 2005-12-19 From 1976 to the beginning of the millennium covering the quarter century life span of this book and its predecessor something remarkable has happened to market response research it has become practice Academics who teach in professional fields like we do dream of such things Imagine the satisfaction of knowing that your work has been incorporated into the decision making routine of brand managers that category management relies on techniques you developed that marketing management believes in something you struggled to establish in their minds It s not just us that we are talking about This pride must be shared by all of the researchers who pioneered the simple concept that the determinants of sales could be found if someone just looked for them Of course economists had always studied demand But the project of extending demand analysis would fall to marketing researchers now called marketing scientists for good reason who saw that in reality the marketing mix was more than price it was advertising sales force effort distribution promotion and every other decision variable that potentially affected sales The bibliography of this book supports the notion that the academic research in marketing led the way The journey was difficult sometimes halting but ultimately market response research advanced and then insinuated itself into the fabric of modern management

Statistical Models and Methods for Financial Markets Tze Leung Lai, Haipeng Xing, 2008-07-25 The idea of writing this book arose in 2000 when the first author was assigned to teach the required course STATS 240 Statistical Methods in Finance in the new M S program in financial mathematics at Stanford which is an interdisciplinary program that aims to provide a master s level education in applied mathematics statistics computing finance and economics Students in the program had different backgrounds in statistics Some had only taken a basic course in statistical inference while others had taken a broad spectrum of M S and Ph D level statistics courses On the other hand all of them had already taken required core courses in investment theory and derivative pricing and STATS 240 was supposed to link the theory and pricing formulas to real world data and pricing or investment strategies Besides students in the program the course also attracted many students from other departments in the university further increasing the heterogeneity of students as many of them had a strong background in mathematical and statistical modeling from the mathematical physical and engineering sciences but no previous experience in finance To address the diversity in background but common strong interest in the subject and in a potential career as a quant in the financial industry the course material was carefully chosen not only to present basic statistical methods of importance to quantitative finance but also to summarize domain knowledge in finance and show how it can be combined with statistical modeling in financial analysis and decision making The course material evolved over the years especially after the second author helped as the head TA during the years 2004 and 2005

The SABR/LIBOR Market Model Riccardo Rebonato,Kenneth McKay,Richard White,2011-03-01 This book presents a major innovation in the interest rate space It explains a financially motivated extension of the LIBOR Market model which accurately reproduces the prices for plain vanilla hedging instruments swaptions and caplets of all strikes and maturities produced by the SABR model The authors show how to accurately recover the whole of the SABR smile surface using their extension of the LIBOR market model This is not just a new model this is a new way of option pricing that takes into account the need to calibrate as accurately as possible to the plain vanilla reference hedging instruments and the need to obtain prices and hedges in reasonable time whilst reproducing a realistic future evolution of the smile surface It removes the hard choice between accuracy and time because the framework that the authors provide reproduces today s market prices of plain vanilla options almost exactly and simultaneously gives a reasonable future evolution for the smile surface The authors take the SABR model as the starting point for their extension of the LMM because it is a good model for European options The problem however with SABR is that it treats each European option in isolation and the processes for the various underlyings forward and swap rates do not talk to each other so it isn t obvious how to relate these processes into the dynamics of the whole yield curve With this new model the authors bring the dynamics of the various forward rates and stochastic volatilities under a single umbrella To ensure the absence of arbitrage they derive drift adjustments to be applied to both the forward rates and their volatilities When this is completed complex derivatives that depend on the joint realisation of all relevant forward rates can now be priced Contents THE THEORETICAL SET UP The Libor Market model The SABR Model The LMM SABR Model IMPLEMENTATION AND CALIBRATION Calibrating the LMM SABR model to Market Caplet prices Calibrating the LMM SABR model to Market Swaption Prices Calibrating the Correlation Structure EMPIRICAL EVIDENCE The Empirical problem Estimating the volatility of the forward rates Estimating the correlation structure Estimating the volatility of the volatility HEDGING Hedging the Volatility Structure Hedging the Correlation Structure Hedging in conditions of market stress

Pension Policies and Public Debt in Dynamic CGE Models Dirk Broer, Jukka Lassila, 2013-11-11 Population aging raises a number of issues regarding the optimality of public debt policy and the systems of public pension provisions that are in use in developed countries The studies in this book address these questions using computable general equilibrium models They give illuminating insights and new empirical estimates of future prospects of pay as you go pension schemes in the big seven OECD countries the possible distortions introduced by the pension systems in four large European economies the effects of lifetime uncertainty in analyzing a potential reform of the Dutch pension system effects of increasing international mobility of financial capital to pension policies and public debt reduction policies in relation to possible adverse effects of taxation on wage formation and unemployment

Choice and Allocation Models for the Housing Market J. Rouwendal, 2012-12-06 It is generally agreed that food clothing and shelter are the three basic material needs of all people A simple test for the successfulness of any economic system may therefore be the extent to which it succeeds in providing the population with these commodities One would conjecture that in the countries that are generally considered as highly developed there would be no problems at all with their availability And although this conjecture is to a large extent confirmed by the evidence it is nevertheless surprising that in western economies with the high per capita incomes housing is still an important object for public concern Food and clothing are abundantly available in these countries but the provision of housing is often an object of serious policy concern To mention one striking example in the Netherlands there still exist official figures that mention housing shortages of ten thousands of dwellings This state of affairs is not mentioned here to motivate an exaggerated view on housing problems in Western countries The situation in the Netherlands and comparable countries is indeed much better than that in underdeveloped countries and a comparison with developing countries would presumably show figures which are comparable to those for food or clothing The point I want to make is that even in highly developed market economies where the availability of food and clothing is quite satisfactory the availability of dwellings often is not
