World Population and Food Supply and Demand Situation United States. Congress. House. Committee on Agriculture. Subcommittee on Departmental Operations, 1974     Population and Food Supply Robert Carter Cook, 1962

Population and Food Supply Conrad Taeuber, Hunger continues to be an ever present companion of many millions of people Although the farmers of the world have grown more food they have not grown enough more to correct the serious undernutrition which has long existed in many countries Since the end of World War II food production has increased about as rapidly as world population but it increased more rapidly in the richer better fed countries while the poorer countries lagged behind Two thirds of the world's 3.3 billion people live in countries with national average diets which are nutritionally inadequate The diet deficient countries generally have high rates of population growth about 2.1 per cent per year compared with about 1.3 per cent per year in the diet adequate areas In recent years the gap in available food supplies per person between the rich and the poor countries has been widening rather than narrowing A growing share of the increase in population in the less developed countries is being sustained by food shipments from the developed regions especially North America The possibilities of increasing food production are very large and they are primarily dependent on increasing the yields of crops and of livestock New methods new strains of plants improved methods of cultivation greatly increased use of fertilizers and greater and more effective use of water are major elements in increasing yields Nonconventional sources of food may in the future add significantly to available food supplies In many countries institutional changes are necessary in order to enable farmers to benefit directly from increased production and to make available the information credit tools and supplies needed to increase yields Rising educational levels are an essential element in programs for such increases population and food supply United Nations. Office of Public Information, 1964     World Population and Food Supply J. H. Lowry, 1970 Secondary education level textbook on geographical aspects of population growth trends nutrition levels and possibilities of intensifying world agriculture References maps and statistical tables

Population and Food in the Early Twenty-first Century Nurul Islam, 1995-01-01 The IFPRI roundtable with its focus on the prospects of a long term balance between food demand and supply provided a link between the two conferences as the adequacy of food supply at affordable prices for future populations is a crucial element in a strategy designed to alleviate poverty and accelerate growth in the context of an increasing population

World Population and World Food Supplies E. John Russell, 2019-07-19 Originally published in 1954 This great work surveys the distribution of the world's population and the food production of all countries chosen as important by reason of either their demands on the world food market or their contributions to it The author concludes that the more advanced countries can be reasonably assured of food supplies for an indefinite period The less advanced countries can no longer rely on self contained systems they must seek co operation with the advanced countries to supply them with the appliances needed for a more highly developed agriculture This book at the time gave statesmen and their scientific advisers agriculturalists and agricultural economists an invaluable new instrument      Food for the Future

United Nations Population Fund,1996 Unless women are placed at the centre of efforts to increase food production and are given support for their reproductive rights and reproductive health vital opportunities will be missed to meet the world s present and future food needs      Population and Food Tim Dyson,1996-04-04 An encouraging assessment of the prospects for feeding humanity in the 21st Century Population and Food examines recent trends in food production and includes case studies from throughout Developed and Developing Worlds      Population and Food Supply Joseph Hutchinson,1969

(U.S.),1976      Fish for the future: Fisheries development and food security for Kiribati in an era of global climate change
Campbell, B.[Author]; Hanich, Q.[Author], The Republic of Kiribati is a vast South Pacific island group with one of the largest exclusive economic zones EEZs in the world Kiribati waters support a wealth of marine fisheries activities These activities occur in oceanic coastal and inshore environments and range from large foreign industrial scale oceanic fishing operations to small scale domestic inshore subsistence fisheries aquaculture and recreational fisheries Kiribati has developed a framework of domestic and international governance arrangements that are designed to sustainably manage its wealth of marine resources The report provides background information for fisheries projects in Kiribati that aim to build food security improve artisanal livelihoods and strengthen community engagement in fisheries governance It provides information on the current status of Kiribati fishery resources oceanic and coastal their current governance and future challenges Fish and fisher alike pay little heed to maritime boundaries and bureaucratic distinctions This report covers both sides of the oceanic coastal boundary because of the I Kiribati communities interest in oceanic fisheries such as tuna and their heavy dependence on its fisheries resources for food security and economic development The report focuses on two potential pilot sites for community based fisheries management projects North Tarawa and Butaritari      World Population and Food Supply Curtis Mark Stewart,1974      Future Dimensions Of World Food And Population Richard G. Woods,1981 Abstract The problems of ensuring the world s food supply the long term implications of population increases upon the food supply and the appropriate role for the United States in responding to world food needs are examined for members of Congress for private groups college students and citizens concerned about world hunger Specific topics considered are the global problem of balancing population and food the potential sources of food plants livestock aquatic animals the process of agricultural development the influence of trade and investment and the consequences for the US impact of international development food energy requirements national security wz      Perspectives on Development and Population Growth in the Third

World O.G. Simmons, 2012-12-06 Until the early to mid 1970s social scientists in the fields of population and development were largely going their own ways Demographers relied almost exclusively on demographic transition theory as their paradigm for understanding the role of development in population change and fertility decline Conversely most development economists and other specialists were certainly aware of the constraints placed upon development objectives by population growth However the main development theories paid little attention to population and the implications of population growth for development Indeed it was not until after the World Population Conference in Bucharest in 1974 that the interaction of population and development became a serious and positive theme for social scientific study Accordingly since about the mid 1970s an extensive literature in the field of population and development has been generated And in 1975 under the auspices of The Population Council the journal Population and Development Review was founded a journal which in the past decade has developed into the premier publication in the world for work in this area But our understanding of development as it refers to change in Third World countries remained fragmented Moreover our understanding of the linkages and interactions between population and development was very limited It is in this regard that Ozzie Simmons's Perspectives on Development and Population Growth in the Third World will certainly have an impact

Contested Worlds

Martin Phillips, 2017-09-29 Contested Worlds provides an introduction both to a multitude of geographical worlds which are currently being actively constructed and contested and to a range of different perspectives on these worlds being adopted and contested by geographers It is unique in its focus on the role of contestation in both the construction of geographical studies and in the geographies these studies seek to address These issues are explored through a combination of general theoretical discussion and detailed international case studies The areas discussed range in scale from the global through the regional and national to the local worlds of the inner city the neighbourhood and the village with connections drawn between these scales The book concludes that geography is being made in quite different ways It asserts that geography is intrinsically a contested enterprise and that this should be embraced as part of geographers becoming more critically involved in the making and studying of new contemporary human geographies

Population Growth and Food Supply

Carol A. Singer, 1993    Émile Durkheim's Contributions to Sociological Theory Charles Elmer Gehlke, 1915    Population, Food, and Rural Development Ronald Demos Lee, 1988 Surveying the impact of population growth where it is believed to matter most the rural areas of developing countries this volume explicates its effects on food production It examines such factors as forecasts of global food output technological progress in agriculture choice of agricultural systems and population growth and access to land
