

Portfolio Output No. 21: Reflections on Leadership and Membership

Write on any one or a combination of the following:

- a. A leader that fits in the description 'Servant leader.'
- b. An organization that has a 'servant leader.'
- c. The key points of the article.
- d. Your comments/reactions about the article.
- e. The part of the article that has an impact to you.
- f. A story that would support or negate the points of the article.
- g. A poster or slogan on the things you learned from the article.

My Answer:

A leader that fits the description of a "servant leader" is Mahatma Gandhi. He is often cited as an example of a servant leader because of his focus on serving the needs of his followers and working for the betterment of his community. He led India to independence through peaceful civil disobedience, always putting the needs of his people first.

An organization that has a "servant leader" is Patagonia, a clothing company known for its commitment to environmental sustainability and fair labor practices. The company's founder, Yvon Chouinard, is often considered a servant leader because of his focus on using business as a force for good and prioritizing the well-being of the planet and its inhabitants over profits.

The key points of a servant leader are:

Putting the needs of followers first

Focusing on the growth and development of followers

Leading by example

Being a servant to the community

My comments on the article is that servant leadership is a valuable approach to leadership, as it prioritizes the well-being of the community and leads to more effective, fulfilling, and sustainable outcomes. It is a leadership style that emphasizes on being of service to the people who work with and for you, rather than being focused on personal gain.

A story that would support the points of the article is the story of a small business owner who prioritizes the needs of her employees and customers, going above and beyond to ensure their satisfaction and well-being. This results in a positive, productive work environment and strong relationships with customers.
