Saving Britains Art Treasures:

Saving Britain's Art Treasures N. J. McCamley, 2003-03-19 This book explains for the first time the full story of the wartime adventures of Britain's greatest art treasures. At first the pictures and other artifacts were distributed amongst a number of large country houses. Initially the owners of these houses almost fought one another for the right to house the Treasures. Later when further accommodation was needed for treasures from the provincial museums, the tables turned and the Office of Works was reduced to bribing owners by promising that they would be spared billetees and that their houses would be immune from requisitioning. By mid 1940 however circumstances transpired that made the country houses untenable. German air bases in northern France made the whole of Britain vulnerable. Eventually two deep underground repositories were constructed, one in Wales and one in Wiltshire, and by the end of 1942 virtually all the cultural heritage of the nation was concentrated there. Building and operation of these underground treasure houses did not, however, go smoothly as described here.

Museums in the Second World War Catherine Pearson, 2017-06-26 Exploring the role of museums, galleries, and curators during the upheaval of the Second World War, this book challenges the accepted view of a hiatus in museum services during the conflict and its immediate aftermath. Instead, it argues that new thinking in the 1930s was realised in a number of promising initiatives during the war, only to fail during the fragmented post-war recovery. Based on new research including interviews with retired museum staff, letters, diaries, museum archives, and government records, this study reveals a complex picture of both innovation and inertia. At the outbreak of war, precious objects were stored away and staff numbers reduced, but although many museums were closed, others successfully campaigned to remain open. By providing innovative modern exhibitions and education initiatives, they became popular and valued venues for the public. After the war, however, museums returned to their more traditional collections-centred approach and failed to negotiate the public funding needed for reconstruction based on this narrower view of their role. Hence, in the longer term, the destruction and economic and social consequences of the conflict served to delay aspirations for reconstruction until the 1960s. Through this lens, the history of the museum in the mid-twentieth century appears as one shaped by the effects of war but equally determined by the input of curators, audiences, and the state. The museum thus emerges not as an isolated institution concerned only with presenting the past but as a product of the changing conflicts and cultures within society.

Safeguarding Cultural Property and the 1954 Hague Convention Emma Cunliffe, Paul Fox, 2022 Significant attention today focusses on heritage destruction, but the key international laws prohibiting it, the 1954 Hague Convention for the Protection of Cultural Property in the Event of Armed Conflict and its First and Second Protocols, 1954/1999, lay out two core strands to limit the damage: the measures of respect for armed forces and the safeguarding measures states parties should put in place in peacetime. This volume incorporates wide-ranging international perspectives from those in the academy together with practitioner insights from the armed forces and heritage professionals to explore the safeguarding regime. Its contributors consider such questions as whether state parties have truly taken all possible steps as the Convention tasks them what we can learn from past practice and how the Convention is implemented today the implications of new trends in heritage law and management such as the rise of the World Heritage Convention and in the increasing focus on safe havens rather than refuges whether new methods of heritage management such as Risk Assessment theory can be applied and in a Convention specifically focussed on state parties what of their opponents armed non state actors Using a mix of case studies and theoretical explorations of new and existing methodologies the contributions cover a broad timespan from World War II to today with examples from Europe the Middle East and Africa Overall the volume s purpose is to promote wider understanding of the practical effectiveness of the Convention in the contemporary world by investigating the perceived opportunities and constraints the Convention offers today to protect cultural property in armed conflict and firmly establishing that such protection must begin in peace

Curating the Great War Paul Cornish,Nicholas J. Saunders,2022-08-31

Curating the Great War explores the inception and subsequent development of museums of the Great War and the animating spirit which lay behind them The book approaches museums of the Great War as political entities some more overtly than others but all unable to escape from the politics of the war its profound legacies and its enduring memory Their changing configurations and content are explored as reflections of the social and political context in which they exist Curating of the Great War has expanded beyond the walls of museum buildings seeking public engagement both direct and digital and taking in whole landscapes Recognizing this fact the book examines these museums as standing at the nexus of historiography museology anthropology archaeology sociology and politics as well as being a lieux de m moire Their multi vocal nature makes them a compelling subject for research and above all the book highlights that it is in these museums that we see the most complete fusion of the material culture of conflict with its historical political and experiential context This book is an essential read for researchers of the reception of the Great War through material culture and museums

War Paint Brian Foss,Professor of Art History School for Studies in Art and Culture Brian Foss,2007-01-01

In this groundbreaking examination of British war art during the Second World War Brian Foss delves deeply into what art meant to Britain and its people at a time when the nation s very survival was under threat Foss probes the impact of war art on the relations between art state patronage and public interest in art and he considers how this period of duress affected the trajectory of British Modernism Supported by some two hundred illustrations and extensive archival research the book offers the richest most nuanced view of mid century art and artists in Britain yet written The author focuses closely on Sir Kenneth Clark s influential War Artists Advisory Committee and explores topics ranging from censorship to artists finances from the depiction of women as war workers to the contributions of war art to evolving notions of national identity and Britishness Lively and insightful the book adds new dimensions to the study of British art and cultural history
