

MODERNIZATION AND POLITICAL CHANGE

The Latin American and Amer-European Nations

ARTHUR S. BANKS

ARTHUR S. BANKS is currently working on a multivariate analysis of cross-national time-series data under a grant from the National Science Foundation. He is Associate Professor of Political Science and Director of the Center for Comparative Political Research of the State University of New York at Binghamton. He is author (with Robert B. Textor) of A Cross-Polity Survey.

A DECADE has now passed since the publication of Seymour M. Lipset's (1969) seminal article, "Some Social Requisites of Democracy." As in the case of most such efforts to chart a new course in behavioral science, the article earned its author both praise and criticism—praise for what he was attempting to do, criticism (both conceptual and methodological) for the manner of its execution (see Cutright, 1963). The present paper reports on research that represents, in part, a return to Lipset's earlier terrain, namely, a comparison between the Latin American and Amer-European nations, as measured by longitudinal indices both political and "developmental" in character. The indicators upon which the present research is based differ, however, from those employed by Lipset. The political indicators were selected with reference to problems of change, rather than of legitimacy, while the remainder (a set of transportation and communications measures) relate to what may be termed technological modernization, rather than to Lipset's "economic development."¹ The principal purpose of the study is to assess the relative homogeneity of (hence the relative "distance" between) the two groups of nations, along the dimensions indicated, for a series of thirteen data points

AUTHOR'S NOTE: Research for this paper has been supported by the National Science Foundation under grant GS-2420.
