 Vol. 10, No. 1
 Spring 1982

editors Ted Hughes and Daniel Weissbort advisory editors A. Alvarez, George Marshall, Peter Redgrove, Alan Sillitoe, Charles Tomlinson.

Our policy is to concentrate on a limited number of poets in each issue, and to represent each one by a larger number of his work than is usually possible in less specialized magazines, rather than to include many poets each with one or two poems. The type of translations we are seeking can be described as those which, though not literal in a strict technical sense, though this may seem at first suspect, it is more apposite to define our criteria negatively, as literalness can only be a deliberate tendency, not a dogma. We feel that as skilled as devices extraneous to the original are employed for the purpose of recreating its "spirit", the value of the whole enterprise is called in question. Also "imitations" like Robert Lowell's, while undeniably beautiful, are the second of the best of one poet's imitations on another's. They may help in the appreciation of the original, they may simply obscure it. In any case, the original becomes strangely irrelevant. Poetry inevitably loses beauty in translation, but those poets who claim that it is precisely "the poetry" which is lost are speaking as though "the poetry" were some separable ingredient, some additive like the whitening agent in a detergent. We feel that enough of the whole is preservable in some, though by no means in all, poetry.

It will be noted that in our first issue there is a minimum of comment. Indeed there is virtually no comment, simply bare biographical and bibliographical data. This is to some extent the result of our embarrassment at the amount of material we had. As it is we have had to leave out much we should like to have included. We were reluctant to have to leave out still more to make room for critical surveys. Furthermore we are convinced that experience should, in any case, come before judgment, that it is more important to be somewhere than simply to have the illusion that one knows where one is. There has been little attempt to impose any unity on this first issue, but the unity, such as it is, has imposed itself on us. While we had material coming from many other areas of the world, it was that which came from Eastern Europe, which was somehow the most insistent. It is this region which has been at the centre of our attention.

One of the most remarkable features of the poetry printed in this first issue is its sense of purpose, its confidence in the social as well as private value of poetry, its confidence that it is being heard. This poetry is more universal than ours. It deals in issues, universally comprehensible. It does not fight shy of philosophy. It does not hide behind literary mystery. As compared with our poetry it comes out into the open. We feel that this magazine, could it but reach a wider audience than poetry magazines usually do, could not fail to engage that audience. But it is not our aim to disparage English poetry by invidious comparison. We feel, on the contrary, that closer acquaintance with what is being written elsewhere can only stimulate poetry-making in this country.

These briefly of our aims and methods. And now our plans for future issues. A Scandinavian issue is at present being planned by a leading young Swedish critic and poet. Translations have been loaned to translators of German poetry and help has been generously offered. We have already collected considerable interesting material from Latin America, a region which could well absorb many issues of our journal. Material for an Israeli issue is also being collected. A fairly comprehensive number on Russia, dealing not only with the younger contemporary poets who have excited such interest lately, but with some of the major figures of the Russian and Russian, as well as of the immediately pre-revolutionary period, is also being prepared.

Finally, no reader must take away the impression that there is only one poet of note in each country. In this issue we have concentrated on the one we could get most of, and these need not necessarily be the best available. We hope to devote entire issues to each of the countries represented here.

Yehuda Amichai Israel

Born in Germany in 1924, he came to Israel in 1954. His first book (a volume of poetry) appeared in 1955. Since then he has published four other volumes of poetry and one of short stories. His first novel, published by Schocken, was Not Now, Not Here, and in the same year his novel, Not Now, Not Here, came out. His play, Journey to Nimrod, was produced by Habimah in 1964.

Amichai has been awarded the Shlorensky Prize and two Akas Prizes for poetry and prose respectively. His play Beit and Train was the first prize in Kol Israel's competition for original radio scripts. Amichai, who is a teacher by profession, lives in Jerusalem. He is married and has a son.

Yosef ben Mattityahu (Josephus Flavius) was a field-commander of the Judean Army in Galilee that fought Vespasian and Titus. He went over to the Romans, and wrote the history of the campaign he had fought. He chose to write about what he had been involved in. I agree with Josephus. I want to be involved and avoid writing, and then to be detached and write. The debate continues as to whether Josephus was, or was not, a traitor.

Yehuda Amichai

A Room by the Sea

Will like the fingers of an empty glove.
A table weighed with silence like a parting.
The sea outside. And a shoe filled with nothing.

Looking for a foot that took its leave.

A fortress of restraint moved by two feet.
Almost books. And a glass without a use.
A bit of old air: two years, perhaps, since it Refused to go out, and stayed here for always.

And suddenly a seawind feels me
As women feel the cloth in a store;
Is he good, will he wash well in the laundry?

Later I wore a flag of doubt once more.
I hung it up, and looked outside to find
How it clatters, moving in the wind.

translation Don Marasco

When I was a Boy

When I was a boy
Grasses and masts stood beside the shore,
And I, lying there,
Couldn't distinguish between them,
For they all rose up to the sky above me.
Only the words of my mother stayed with me
Like a slice of bread wrapped in rustling tissue

And I did not know when my father
would return,
For there was another forest beyond the clearing.

Everything held out a hand,
A bull tossed the sun on its horns,
And in the nights the streetlights stroked
My cheeks with the walls,
And the moon, like a great jar, tilted itself
And watered my thirsty sleep.

translation M. Benaya

High Heels

The earth answered several times: come in!
When you walked upon it with high heels,
Crossing the road with a tap. Come in!
It said. But you couldn't hear.

translation Arlieh Sachs

My Mother Baked the Whole World For Me

My mother baked the whole world for me
In little sweet cakes.
My love filled my window
With rainbows of stars.
I enclosed happiness within me like air
Pockets in a loaf of bread.
Outside I am smooth and quiet and brown.
The world loves me.
But my hair is and like the weeds in a drying marsh—
All kinds of rare and beautiful plumage Fly from me.

translation Arlieh Sachs

The U.N. Command in Jerusalem

The mediators, the peace-makers, the compromisers, the conciliators
Live in the white house,
And receive their secretariat from afar,
Through oblique channels, through dark veins, like an embryo.
And their secretaries are lipstick and laughing,
And their diplomatically-income chauffeurs wait
below like stalled horses.
And the trees which shade them are rooted in roman's land,
And the debates are children who go out into the field in pink cyclamen
And do not return.
And thoughts hover above, unquiet, like scout planes
And photograph and return and develop the pictures
In dim and sorrowful rooms.
And I know that they have their heavy chandeliers,
And the boy that I was sits on them and swings
Out and back, until he does not come back.
And later the night will reach
Steady and twisted conclusions from our old lives,
And above the houses the time will gather the scattered words
As a hand gathers crumbs from the table
After the meal, when the conversation goes on
And the children have already gone to bed,
And hopes come to me like daring seafarers,
Like discoverers of continents to an island
Where they stay a day or two
And rest
And later sail away.

translation Margalit Benaya

When Three or Four are Gathered in a Room

When three or four are gathered in a room
there's always one who's standing by a window,
And he must see injustice among the thorns,
and decaying the hill,
and see how men who went forth whole are returned to their homes at nightfall like small change.

When three or four are gathered in a room
there's always one who's standing by a window:
dark hair above his thoughts,
behind him words,
before him words wandering without a knapsack,
waterless prophecies, hearts without provisions,
large stones returned,
unread, like letters with no address and no one to receive them.

translation Robert Friend

The First Battles

The first battles bore
scary love-flowers
with almost-finishng kisses like shells.
Boy-soldiers in our elegant town-buses—
Number Twelve, Number Eight, Number Five—
drive to the front.

translation Dennis Silk
