New Freedom Of The Future Generation:

The New Freedom Woodrow Wilson, 2025-08-29T18:31:02Z Woodrow Wilson was the 28th president of the United States. The New Freedom, a collection of speeches he made during his successful 1912 presidential campaign, takes its name from that campaign platform. In it, Wilson describes the conditions necessary for freedom in a rapidly changing society and highlights the dangers from monopolies and politicians that are either bought or too cozy with business interests. To combat these regressive influences, Wilson stresses the need for open and participatory democracy as well as positive government intervention to promote individual rather than business freedom. Throughout these speeches, Wilson shows an unwavering belief in democracy and the wisdom of the people. He admits that he doesn't have all the answers and begrudges those who make that claim for themselves. According to Wilson, politicians of all parties have been slow to recognize a change in power dynamics. Whereas once workers were familiar with their bosses, now workers toil for faceless corporations that have almost unlimited power over them and bear no practical social responsibilities. Wilson stresses that power over others isn't a sign of wisdom or virtue and that the government should be emboldened to break up such powers to allow for a fair playing field. He remarks that ignoring these new economic power relations risks disillusioning voters, leaving the door open for unscrupulous politicians to promise easy answers that lead to ruin. This book is part of the Standard Ebooks project, which produces free public domain ebooks.

Yates, 2013-08-01 While the Civil Rights Movement is remembered for efforts to end segregation and secure the rights of African Americans the larger economic vision that animated much of the movement is often overlooked today That vision sought economic justice for every person in the United States regardless of race It favored production for social use instead of profit social ownership and democratic control over major economic decisions The document that best captured this vision was the Freedom Budget for All Americans Budgeting Our Resources 1966-1975 To Achieve Freedom from Want published by the A Philip Randolph Institute and endorsed by a virtual who's who of U.S. left liberalism and radicalism Now two of today's leading socialist thinkers return to the Freedom Budget and its program for economic justice Paul Le Blanc and Michael D. Yates explain the origins of the Freedom Budget how it sought to achieve freedom from want for all people and how it might be reimagined for our current moment Combining historical perspective with clear sighted economic proposals the authors make a concrete case for reviving the spirit of the Civil Rights Movement and building the society of economic security and democratic control envisioned by the movement's leaders a struggle that continues to this day Public Papers of the Presidents of the United States: George Bush, 1990 Bush, George, 1991-01-01 Public Papers of the Presidents of the United States The New Freedom of the Future Generation Lucy Re-Bartlett, 1913
