Unfitting Stories Valerie Raoul, 2007-03-30 Unfitting Stories: Narrative Approaches to Disease, Disability and Trauma illustrates how stories about ill health and suffering have been produced and received from a variety of perspectives. Bringing together the work of Canadian researchers, health professionals and people with lived experiences of disease, disability or trauma, it addresses central issues about authority in medical and personal narratives and the value of cross or interdisciplinary research in understanding such experiences. The book considers the aesthetic dimensions of health-related stories with literary readings that look at how personal accounts of disease, disability and trauma are crafted by writers and filmmakers into published works. Topics range from psychiatric hospitalization and aestheticizing cancer to father-daughter incest in film. The collection also deals with the therapeutic or transformative effect of stories with essays about men's sport and spinal cord injury, narrative teaching at L'Arche, a faith-based network of communities inclusive of people with developmental disabilities and the construction of a schizophrenic identity. A final section examines the polemical functions of narrative, directing attention to the professional and political contexts within which stories are constructed and exchanged. Topics include ableist limits on self-narration, drug addiction and the disease model and narratives of trauma and Aboriginal post-secondary students. Unfitting Stories is essential reading for researchers using narrative methods or materials for teachers, students and professionals working in the field of health services and for concerned consumers of the health care system. It deals with practical problems relevant to policy makers as well as theoretical issues of interest to specialists in bioethics, gender analysis and narrative theory.
