scholarly book so authoritative in its claims and innovative in its concepts threatens to shake up the curriculum field at its foundations Rich in metaphor and meaning the superbly written chapters challenge a field that once more became moribund as we settled so far too comfortably into accepting handed down frames and fictions about knowledge authority power and agency that imprint cognitive damage on those forced to the margins of schools and universities Disrupting Higher Education Curriculum demonstrates however that it is in fact from those margins of the education enterprise that academics teachers and learners can see more clearly how patterns of thought and action hold us back from placing and experiencing our African humanity at the centre of the curriculum Jonathan Jansen Rector and Vice Chancellor of the University of the Free State South Africa

Yuichi Handa, 2013-05-13 This book opens up alternative ways of thinking and talking about ways in which a person can know a subject in this case mathematics leading to a reconsideration of what it may mean to be a teacher of that subject In a number of European languages a distinction is made in ways of knowing that in the English language is collapsed into the singular word know In French for example to know in the savoir sense is to know things facts names how and why things work and so on whereas to know in the connaître sense is to know a person a place or even a thing namely an other in such a way that one is familiar with or in relationship with this other Primarily through phenomenological reflection with a touch of empirical input this book fleshes out an image for what a person's connaître knowing of mathematics might mean turning to mathematics teachers and teacher educators to help clarify this image
