Nutrition, Aging, and the Elderly D.E. Danford, H.N. Munro, 2013-11-11 The proportion of the population over 65 years of age is increasing steadily in most industrialized countries In the United States the proportion of elderly people has risen from four percent in 1900 to 11 % in 1978 and is projected to be 14% by the year 2000 The occurrence of debilitating chronic diseases in the elderly increases with each additional year These diseases along with the natural loss of tissue function that occurs throughout adult life impose a heavy burden on the health care system Nutrition plays an important etiologic role in many of these degenerative changes Consequently the aging segment of the population presents a challenge to the nutrition scientist who should be able to recommend optimal intakes of nutrients to minimize the functional losses associated with aging and to optimize the health of those already elderly This sixth volume in the series Human Nutrition A Comprehensive Treatise provides a conspectus of the various interactions of nutrition with the aging process and a comprehensive survey of current knowledge of the amounts of individual nutrients needed by the elderly The volume begins with a general survey of the multifaceted relationship of nutrition to aging followed by four chapters on how nutrition can affect age related changes in selected body functions The next six chapters cover the available evidence regarding the needs of the elderly for dietary energy protein calcium trace elements vitamins and fiber Life Span Nutrition Sharon Rady Rolfes, Linda K.

DeBryune, Eleanor Noss Whitney, 1998 This book covers nutritional needs over the entire life span from prenatal to elder years It focuses on nutrition during pregnancy infancy childhood adolescence and adulthood Each life span section features a specialized topic for focus such as weight control for early adulthood disease prevention for middle adulthood and managing the aging process for older adulthood Integration of environment and nutrition in life cycle assessment of food items: Opportunities and challenges McLaren, S., Berardy, A., Henderson, A., Holden, N., Huppertz, T., Jolliet, O., De Camillis, C., Renouf, M., Rugani, B, 2021-12-23 This report is the outcome of a consensus building project to agree on best practices for environmental and nutritional Life Cycle Assessment nLCA methodology and identify future research needs The project involved 30 nutritional and environmental LCA researchers from 18 countries It focused on the assessment of food items as opposed to meals or diets Best practice recommendations were developed to address the intended purpose of an LCA study and related modeling approach choice of an appropriate functional unit assessment of nutritional value and reporting nLCA results An nLCA study should report the quantities of as many essential nutrients as possible and aim to provide information on the nutritional quality and or health impacts in addition to nutrient quantities Outstanding issues requiring further research attention include defining a minimum number of nutrients to be considered in an nLCA study treatment of nutrients to limit use of nutrient indexes further development of Impact Assessment methods representation of nutritional changes that may occur during subsequent distribution and food preparation in cradle to gate nLCA studies and communication of data uncertainty and variability More data are required for different regions particularly developing countries for the processing distribution retail and consumption life cycle stages and for food loss and waste Finally there is a need to extend nLCA methodology for the assessment of meals and diets to consider further how to account for the multi functionality of food in a sustainability framework and to set nLCA studies within the context of environmental limits These results provide a robust basis for improving nLCA methodology and applying it to identify solutions that minimize the trade offs between nourishing populations and safeguarding the environment
