Essay Sample on Ernst Cassirer's Political Mythology: An Anthropological Perspective Essay

Introduction

Ernst Cassirer's interest in political mythologizing focuses on an anthropological positioning grounded on neo-Kantian epistemology (Barash, 2000). Heller's concept of the fictionalization of politics is rooted in the application of myth uttered by political organizations for mass management. On the other hand, Ernst Cassirer's examinations of this aspect are centered on extensive anthropology of political myth established over several decades (Barash, 2000). The essay will highlight Ernst Cassirer's critique of modern political myth.

The topic which most explicitly draws the most audience into analyzing Cassirer's writing is the connection between the preliminary theory of myth in Mythical thought, focusing mainly with the myth of non-western cultures, and later the political theory of myth defined by him in the Myth of the State, that focuses with modernity. Ernst Cassirer also attempted to explain the radical politicization of the Machtstaat evident in the twentieth century (Barash, 2000). The fundamental element of Cassirer's notion of myth lies in his attempt to critique on the grounds of its general theory of myth, for the phenomenon efficacy of modern political myth (Barash, 2000).

Cassirer recognized that they "myth of politics in the twentieth century" (an ideology ostensibly extracted from Der Mythos des Zwanzigsten Jahrhunderts a german titled book by the Nazi ideologist Alfred Rosenberg) (Barash, 2000). He described the modern political mythology as a conscious fabrication established through its capability to mystify the masses and to serve as a weapon in political war (Barash, 2000). It is this aspect as a consciously fabricated tool that demonstrates the uniqueness of contemporary myths concerning other elements of mythmaking. However, the "myth of the twentieth century" stands out as the true sense of the word since its efficiency derives from a general anthropological source (Barash, 2000).

On the grounds of his attraction connecting the ancient and contemporary myths, accounting for the specific potency of myth-making as a general form of anthropological endeavor. He launched his sweeping analysis of modern myth-making and of the tendency among certain modern philosophical orientations to propel the recrudescence of myth in support of the Machtstaat. Cassirer's criticism is centered upon a profound conviction inspiring his work as a whole, his notion that the truth of a doctrine is closely associated with its ethical consequences.

In Chapter one of The place of language and myth in the pattern of human culture, Ernst Cassirer argues that mythology is inevitable, natural, and an inherent need of language (Cassirer, 1946). He further states that if humans acknowledge language as an outward form and manifestation of thought, they will realize that the dark shadow which language builds upon a thought, and that it can never disappear until the language becomes wholly comparable with the thought (Cassirer, 1992). Finally, Mythology is the highest sense of power and authority executed by language on thought in every possible sphere of mental activity (Cassirer, 1992).
