*Abstract - Information is considered as one of the basic needs of mankind in this information era. Therefore, it becomes an important duty of a state to facilitate its citizen for information access, easily and freely. Community Information is considered as problem-solving bustle which helps the people to take right decision at right time. It can be further described as 'survival information', which means information for everyone in a community for their day-to-day life. Having said the importance of information, public Libraries play a vital role in information dissemination to a wide range of user community at free of cost. This study attempts to explore various community information needs and to find out all the possible opportunities to provide Community Information Services (CIS) through public libraries. ### Introduction

The developments in the Information and Communication Technology (ICT) during the past three decades have made tremendous changes in all walks of life, libraries have no exemption in this revolutionary changes, in fact, it could be mentioned that the libraries are more beneficiaries because information acquiring, preserving, maintaining and disseminating have become more easier, faster and accurate than the early periods. But still, it is vary from library itself, that is, the public libraries didn't get the fullest benefits, which ICT brought into, because of Government's meager attention on these libraries. No one can deny the fact that the public libraries are the poor recipient of so called ICT revolutions. Public libraries in the developing countries are still in a traditional mode of library services. They are concerned about providing daily newspapers with some periodicals.

The UNESCO's Public Library Manifesto defined the public library as a 'local centre of information, making all kinds of knowledge and information readily available to its users'<sup>1</sup>.
