William Frawley, 2013-04-17 William Frawley University of Delaware Several years ago I performed a kind of perverse experiment I showed to several linguistic colleagues the following comment made by Walker Percy in The Message in the Bottle language is too important a problem to be left only to linguists The linguists responses were peculiarly predictable What does Percy know He's a mercenary outsider a novelist a psychiatrist How can he say something like that Now it should be known that the linguists who said such things in response were ardent followers of the linguistic vogue to cross disciplines at whim for the sake of explanation any explanation It was odd to say the least Percy was damned by the very people who agreed with him Fortunately the papers in this book though radically interdisciplinary do not fall prey to the kind of hypocrisy described above The papers from the Third Delaware Symposium on Language Studies address the question of literacy a linguistic problem too important to be left only to linguists but many of the authors are not linguists at all and those who are linguists have taken the care to see beyond the parochialism of a single discipline The subsequent papers have been written by psychologists linguists anthropologists computer scientists and language teachers to explain the problem of how humans develop comprehend and produce extended pieces of information discourses and texts     Labour Theory of

has been paid by Western Marxists to evolutionary theory Taking as a starting point an unfinished essay by Engels the author argues that the human species must be seen as discontinuous with its nearest biological ancestors that a qualitative distinction was brought about by social labour It is argued that the most likely forms of human organization were co operative and field studies are discussed which apparently provide evidence for tool use and linguistic ability among the higher primates The relationship between hand and brain in terms of Marxist psychology is also elaborated Cognition, Education, and Deafness David S.
