Setting Priorities For Large Research Facility Projects Supported By The National Science Foundation:

Setting Priorities for Large Research Facility Projects Supported by the National Science Foundation National Research Council, Division on Engineering and Physical Sciences, Board on Physics and Astronomy, Policy and Global Affairs, Committee on Science, Engineering, and Public Policy, Committee on Setting Priorities for NSF-Sponsored Large Research Facility Projects, 2004-07-15 In 1995 the National Science Foundation NSF created a special account to fund large several tens of millions of dollars research facilities Over the years these facilities have come to represent an increasingly prominent part of the nation's R D portfolio Recently concern has intensified about the way NSF is selecting projects for this account In 2003 six U S Senators including the chair and ranking member of the Senate Subcommittee on VA HUD and Independent Agencies Appropriations expressed these concerns in a letter to the NRC asking it to review the current prioritization process and report to us on how it can be improved This report presents a series of recommendations on how NSF can improve its priority setting process for large research facilities While noting that NSF has improved this process the report states that further strengthening is needed if NSF is to meet future demands for such projects

Setting Priorities For Large Research Facility Projects Supported By the National Science Foundation, 2005 The National Academies Report regarding NSF's process for identifying approving constructing and managing large research facility projects states A number of concerns have been expressed by policy makers and researchers about the process used to rank large research facility projects for funding First the ability of new projects to be considered for approval at the National Science Board NSB level has stalled in the face of a backlog of approved but unfunded projects Second the rationale and criteria used to select projects and set priorities among projects for MREFC funding have not been clearly and publicly articulated Third there is a lack of funding for disciplines to conduct idea generating and project ranking activities and once ideas have some level of approval a lack of funding for conceptual development planning engineering and design information needed when judging whether a project is ready for funding in light of its ranking and for preparing a project for funding if it is selected Those concerns have eroded confidence among policy makers and the research community that large research facility projects are being ranked on the basis of their potential returns to science technology and society The report includes a number of recommendations by the Study Committee for actions by NSF to address these concerns The National Science Foundation NSF embraces the spirit of the Report's recommendations In this response we address the principles of the primary recommendations leaving the detailed mechanisms to be addressed in consultation with our communities the Office of Management and Budget OMB and Congress
