Real Time Computing Alexander D. Stoyenko, 2013-12-14 NATO's Division of Scientific and Environmental Affairs sponsored this Advanced Study Institute because it was felt to be timely to cover this important and challenging subject for the first time in the framework of NATO's ASI programme. The significance of real time systems in everyone's life is rapidly growing. The vast spectrum of these systems can be characterised by just a few examples of increasing complexity: controllers in washing machines, air traffic control systems, control and safety systems of nuclear power plants and finally future military systems like the Strategic Defense Initiative (SDI). The importance of such systems for the well being of people requires considerable efforts in research and development of highly reliable real time systems. Furthermore, the competitiveness and prosperity of entire nations now depend on the early application and efficient utilisation of computer integrated manufacturing systems (CIM) of which real time systems are an essential and decisive part. Owing to its key significance in computerised defence systems, real time computing has also a special importance for the Alliance. The early research and development activities in this field in the 1960s and 1970s aimed towards improving the then unsatisfactory software situation. Thus, the first high level real time languages were defined and developed: RTL 2, Coral 66, Procol LTR and PEARL. In close connection with these language developments and with the utilisation of special purpose process control peripherals, the research on real time operating systems advanced considerably.
