Recent Recruiting Trends And Their Implications For Models Of Enlistment Supply:

Recent Recruiting Trends and Their Implications for Models of Enlistment Supply, 1998 Concerns have arisen over the ability of the military services to meet their recruiting requirements over the next few years The number of recruiters and the advertising budget have been cut over the course of the drawdown as recruit cohorts have shrunk by over a third As compared with FY95 a 20 percent increase in accessions greater than 40 percent for the Army was needed by FY97 if the services were to meet the force strengths planned for that year Beginning in the early part of this decade anecdotal evidence suggested that recruiters had been having trouble achieving their goals A preliminary RAND investigation in 1994 indicated that there should not have been a supply shortage in the early to mid 1990s Here we revisit that question with a more thorough analysis restricting ourselves to supply projection models based on econometric analysis of specific supply and demand determinants Other parts of the larger research project examine other aspects of recruiting trends As the parameters in earlier models were estimated with data from the 1980s we re estimate the models with 1990s data to determine whether those parameters and thus the underlying supply process have changed We also determine whether any changes in factors influencing supply occurred Finally we use the updated model using 1990s data to predict the adequacy of supply in FY97

An Annotated Bibliography of

Recruiting Research Conducted in the U.S. Armed Services and in Foreign Services Lisa M. Penney, 2001 This is an annotated bibliography of research conducted on military recruiting by the U S Army Research Institute for the Behavioral and Social Sciences ARI the other U S military services and foreign military organizations To provide a framework for the research summaries they are organized around a model of military recruitment showing the important factors contributing to successful recruiting. The model contains the following factors: 1 personnel selection and assessment, 2 training and development, 3 recruiting management and organization, 4 recruiter performance, 5 marketing, 6 youth supply characteristics and influencers, 7 propensity, 8 enlistment decisions, and 9 delayed entry programs. One hundred fifty-one reports are summarized describing recruiting research most relevant to the current U.S. military recruiting environment. It is hoped that the review provides a comprehensive yet concise picture of the research results generated by the U.S. Army, Navy, Marine Corps, Air Force, and foreign service recruiting research communities.

DTIC Technical Report, 1987 Recruiting, Retention, and Future Levels of Military Personnel Heidi L. W. Golding, 2006 A CBO Study: Recruiting, Retention, and Future Levels of Military Personnel, October 2006, 2006 Recruiting Minorities Beth J. Asch, Paul Heaton, Bogdan Savych, 2009-09-08. Since 2000, black representation among high quality recruits in the Army has decreased while Hispanic representation has increased in the Navy, black representation has remained stable, and Hispanic representation has increased. The authors identify factors that explain these trends and consider which policies are likely to be most effective in increasing high quality enlistments among black, Hispanic, and white youth.

Germany's New Security Demographics Wenke Apt, 2013-12-04. Military recruitment will become more difficult in times of demographic aging. The question arises whether demographic change will constrain the capacity of aging states like Germany to conduct foreign policy and pursue their national security interests. Since contemporary military operations still display a strong human element, particular scrutiny is given to the empirical analysis of the determinants of military propensity and military service among youth. An additional human capital projection until 2030 illustrates how the decline in the youth population will interact with trends in educational attainment and adolescent health to further complicate military recruitment in the future. A concluding review of recruiting practices in other NATO countries provides insight in best practice policy options to reduce the military's sensitivity to demographic change. Following this approach, the book gives prominence to a topic that has thus far been underrepresented in the greater discussion of demographic change today, namely the demographic impact on international affairs and strategic calculations.

The American Military After 9/11 M. Morgan, 2008-02-04. This book describes the intense mobilization of American society in the Global War on Terrorism coupled with trends in progress before 9/11. With its focus on maximizing civilian casualties, terrorism has been uniquely able to arouse the popular emotion and make us rethink the use of military force.

Enlistment Decisions in the 1990s M. Rebecca Kilburn, Jacob Alex Klerman, 1999. This work updates previous estimates of individual enlistment models, investigating the relationship between family, individual, local labor market, and other background characteristics and the decision to enlist. The study makes three primary innovations to earlier models. First, it uses data from the early 1990s while the most recent estimates were from the early 1980s. The data report the enlistment behavior of a cohort of individuals from the National Educational Longitudinal

Study NELS who were high school seniors in 1992 In general the authors find that their coefficient estimates are similar to those estimated by earlier models while the mean levels of the explanatory variables are more often significantly different from those in earlier data Second the authors explore the utility of including some additional variables in the model that are more relevant to the 1990s or were not available in early data These include measures of immigrant status criminal behavior drug use in state college tuition and whether parents were in the military The research finds that immigrant status criminal behavior and having parents in the military are significant determinants of individual enlistment decisions Third the authors estimate the individual enlistment decision as a three choice decision whether to enlist enroll in college or work after high school graduation in contrast to earlier studies which modeled the enlistment decisions as a two way choice of whether to enlist or not The study concludes that the trivariate choice model dominates the bivariate model because it produces more significant coefficient estimates and yields more insights into the reasons that individuals enlist rather than choosing alternative activities
