Nutritional, Molecular and Endocrine Perspectives M.W. Gillman, P.D. Gluckman, R.G. Rosenfeld, 2013-01-24 Growth in mammals encompasses several stages from intrauterine growth through infancy and childhood to adolescence Each of these phases is characterized by very specific nutritional molecular and endocrine perspectives which under ideal conditions allow the organism to achieve its genetically programmed growth patterns In this book an international panel of experts addresses these topics in a historical physiological and social perspective The first part investigates the genetic epigenetic molecular and nutritional determinants of intrauterine and postnatal growth Part two deals with non evolutionary changes which occurred in the recent past such as changes in body size in utero during infancy and childhood and during adolescence and the potentially unfavorable consequences of enhanced nutrition and growth including early onset of puberty development of obesity and increases in metabolic and cardiovascular disease The last part addresses the question of which factors define healthy growth in light of the influence of nutritional molecular and endocrine influences Although the association between rapid changes in body size and adverse health effects is clear the precise nature of causality remains uncertain Presenting the latest scientific findings in growth research this publication provides essential reading for pediatricians clinical investigators and health workers Frontiers in the Nutrition Sciences Institute of Medicine, Food and Nutrition

The State of Food Security and Nutrition in the World 2019 Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations,International Fund for Agricultural Development ,World Food Programme,World Health Organization,United Nations Children's Fund,2019-07-15 This year s report presents evidence that the absolute number of people who suffer from hunger continues to slowly increase The report also highlights that food insecurity is more than just hunger For the first time the report provides evidence that many people in the world even if not hungry experience moderate food insecurity as they face uncertainties about their ability to obtain food and are forced to compromise on the quality and or quantity of the food they consume This phenomenon is observed globally not only in low and middle income countries but also in high income countries The report also shows that the world is not on track to meet global nutrition targets including those on low birthweight and on reducing stunting among children under five years Moreover overweight and obesity continue to increase in all regions particularly among school age children and adults The report stresses that no region is exempt from the epidemic of overweight and obesity underscoring the necessity of multifaceted multisectoral approaches to halt and reverse these worrying trends In light of the fragile state of the world economy the report presents new evidence confirming that hunger has been on the rise for many countries where the economy has slowed down or contracted Unpacking the links between economic slowdowns and downturns and food insecurity and malnutrition the report contends that the effects of the former on the latter can only be offset by addressing the root causes of hunger and malnutrition poverty inequality and marginalization
