Serving Children And Families Through Community University Partnerships Success Stories:

Serving Children and Families Through Community-University Partnerships Thomas R. Chibucos, Richard M.

Lerner, 2012-12-06 A consistently identified criticism about contemporary higher education is that academia is not playing a visible role in contributing to the improvement of the lives of people in the community as the lives are lived on a day to day basis. However, there has been a long tradition of such Outreach Scholarship in America and this focus is gaining renewed attention at least in part because policy makers and philanthropic organizations are pressing universities and colleges to use their learning resources in ways that more directly benefit society. Universities have listened to and continue to heed such appeals. Serving Children and Families Through Community University Partnerships Success Stories illustrates such work by presenting several dozen exemplary success stories of community university partnerships that serve to enhance the lives of children, youth, and families. These illustrations are drawn from collaborations across the breadth of the nation and reflect the work of many diverse colleges and universities. Moreover, these partnerships involve an array of target audiences ranging across the individual life span from infancy through old age and involving a diverse set of groups and organizations. In addition, this work takes many forms, for example, technical assistance, evaluation, training, program design and delivery, demonstration, or participatory action research and dissemination. The book is useful to two broad audiences: 1. Individuals in and out of academia in decision making roles that directly impact what gets done or does not get done in colleges and universities; and 2. Persons outside academia who are concerned with creating positive change across a wide range of issues pertinent to the lives of youth, families, and communities. This volume will guide universities and communities to work together to promote positive development in the diverse children, families, and communities of our nation. Serving

University-Community Partnerships Tracy Soska, Alice K. Johnson Butterfield, 2013-05-13 Examine how your university can help solve the complex problems of your community. Community Outreach Partnership Centers (COPC) sponsored by the United States Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) have identified civic engagement and community partnership as critical themes for higher education. This unique book addresses past, present, and future models of university community partnerships. COPC programs, wide-ranging social work partnerships that involve teaching, research, and social change, and innovative methods in the processes of civic engagement. The text recognizes the many professions, schools, and higher education institutions that contribute to advancing civic engagement through university community partnerships. One important contribution this book makes to the literature of civic engagement is that it is the first publication that significantly highlights partnership contributions from schools of social work which are rediscovering their community roots through these initiatives. University Community Partnerships: Universities in Civic Engagement documents how universities are involved in creative individual faculty and program partnerships that help link campus and community partnerships that are vital for teaching research and practice Academics and practitioners discuss outreach initiatives methods of engagement with an emphasis on community organization service learning and other teaching learning methods research models participatory research and high engagement techniques used in university community partnerships The book includes case studies historical studies policy analysis program evaluation and curriculum development University Community Partnerships Universities in Civic Engagement examines the increasing civic engagement of institutions of higher education civic engagement projects involving urban nonprofit community based organizations and neighborhood associations the developmental stages of a COPC partnership problems faced in evaluating COPC programs civic engagement based on teaching and learning how pre tenure faculty can meet research teaching and service requirements through university community partnerships developing an MSW program structured around a single concentration of community partnership how class race and organizational differences are barriers to equality in the civic engagement process University Community Partnerships Universities in Civic Engagement is one of the few available academic resources to address the importance of social work involvement in COPC programs Social work educators students and practitioners community organizers urban planners and anyone working in community development will find it invaluable in providing guidance for community problem solving and creating opportunities for faculty students and community residents to learn from one another

Sacred Places, Civic Purposes E. J. Dionne, Ming Hsu Chen, 2004-05-13 Long before there was a welfare state there were efforts by religious congregations to alleviate poverty Those efforts have continued since the establishment of government programs to help the poor and congregations have often worked with government agencies to provide food clothing and care to set up after school activities provide teen pregnancy counseling and develop programs to prevent crime Until now much of this church state cooperation has gone on with limited opposition or notice But the Bush Administration's new proposal to broaden support for faith based social programs has heated up an already simmering debate What are congregations proper roles in lifting up the poor What should their relationship with government be Sacred Places Civic Purposes explores the question with a lively discussion that crisscrosses every line of partisanship and ideology The result of a series of conferences funded by the Pew Charitable Trusts and sponsored by the Brookings Institution this book focuses not simply on abstract questions of the promise and potential dangers of church state cooperation but also on concrete issues where religious organizations are leading problem solvers The authors experts in their respective fields and from various walks of life examine the promises and perils of faith based organizations in preventing teen pregnancy reducing crime and substance abuse fostering community development bolstering child care and assisting parents and children on education issues They offer conclusions about what congregations are currently doing how government could help and how government could usefully get out of the way Contributors include William T Dickens National Community Development Policy Analysis Network and the Brookings Institution John DiIulio White House Office of Faith Based and Community Initiatives and University of Pennsylvania Floyd Flake Allen AME Church and Manhattan Institute Bill Ga

Transforming Social Inquiry, Transforming Social Action Francine T. Sherman, William R. Torbert, 2012-12-06 John F Kerry United States Senator If we are to reinvigorate and reinforce civic participation in this country at a time when our society is increasingly fragmented and highly technologically based we must find a way to unite distinct communities such as universities regional and non profit organizations and families We must find ways to link academicians students teachers and professionals with the reality of events and circumstances so that theories and ideas mightily pursued within the ivory tower are connected to social reality and useful As the editors and contributors in this volume point out the way to bridge theory practice divide is not merely to interpret and report on circumstances of the real world but rather to deconstruct the separate and distinct communities that exist within our society and actively engage other communities to realize a continuum of mutual understanding collaboration and action It is crucial to include our nation s public schools in this new approach of social inquiry and social action Improving and creating educational opportunity for all children in the United States has been an ongoing critical federal issue We know that when children achieve in school they have a much greater chance of living healthy productive adult lives that will benefit themselves and society and we know that increasing the base of stakeholders in children s education yields those positive results Higher Education Systems 3.0 Jason E. Lane, D. Bruce

Ralston, Richard

M. Lerner, Ann K. Mullis, Coby B. Simerly, John P. Murray, 2012-12-06 Lawton Chiles Governor of Florida 1991 1998 Social Change Public Policy and Community Collaborations Training Human Development Professionals for the Twenty First Century is more than the name of the Third National Applied Developmental Science Conference it is more than the name of a book prepared from the proceedings of this conference It describes one of the largest and most complex challenges facing state government higher education and communities in the coming decade The answer to this challenge will not be found in a college or program in our higher education institution nor in laws conceived and written in state capitals The answers to this challenge are to be found at the place where academia public policy and communities meet The problems and issues that are facing our children and families will require that all the players work together to develop community driven programs designed and evaluated using current research and staffed by highly trained professionals It will be critical that academia policy makers legislators and community members work together to ensure that the programs we design work We must ensure that research is being conducted so that programs that work better are continued and programs that don t are stopped

Evidence-Based Policymaking Karen Bogenschneider, Thomas Corbett, 2011-01-11 This book is for those who believe that good government should be based on hard evidence and that research and policy ought to go hand in hand Unfortunately no such bond exists Rather there is a substantial gap some say chasm between the production of knowledge and its utilization Despite much contrary evidence the authors propose there is a way of doing public policy in a more reflective manner and that a hunger for evidence and objectivity does exist The book is pragmatic drawing on advice from some of the best and brightest informants from both the research and policy communities In their own voices researchers provide incisive analysis about how to bridge the research policy divide and policymakers provide insights about why they use research what kind is most useful where they seek it and how they screen its quality The book breaks through stereotypes about what policymakers are like and provides an insiders view of how the policy process really works Readers will learn what knowledge skills approaches and attitudes are needed to take research findings from the laboratory to lawmaking bodies and how to evaluate one s success in doing so The book s balance between theory and practice will appeal to students in graduate and upper level undergraduate courses in family studies and family policy educational policy law political science public administration public health social work and sociology This book will also be of interest to researchers who want to bring their ideas into policy debate and to those who work with policymakers to advance an evidence based policy agenda
