Adjustment to Severe Physical Disability Charlene DeLoach, Bobby G. Greer, 1981 Updates on giant cell arteritis: Pathogenesis, diagnosis and treatment Andreas P. Diamantopoulos, Stavros Chrysidis, 2023-04-27 The Health and Social Needs of Young Adults with Physical Disabilities Andrew Thomas, Martin Bax, Diane Smyth, 1989 This book addresses a topic that has received surprisingly little attention to date the health and social needs of young adults with physical disabilities Following an extensive review of the contemporary literature on the subject the authors report an in depth study on a large sample of physically disabled 18 to 25 year olds living in two survey areas one urban and one semirural The study which included pediatric examinations and interviews by a social psychologist found that a large proportion of subjects face social and medical problems for instance They have serious health needs that are not being met by the statutory services they left school with less than adequate skills to enable them to lead an independent adult life they are without a daytime occupation or attend day centers that are described as unstimulating places they do not receive all the financial benefits to which they are entitled they are isolated from their peers and lack the social skills to interact with others in a positive and successful way Parents and guardians were also found to receive little physical or emotional support These findings underline the need for a better system of providing and coordinating services for this client group and the authors call for the formation within each local health authority area of an Adult Disability Service that would have a clinical and planning role in terms of health care and that would act as a linchpin in the coordination of health educational social and voluntary services Although this work relates specifically to service provision in the United Kingdom it is felt that the conclusions and recommendations are also broadly applicable to the situation in other countries Models of Implementation of Article 12 of the Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities (CRPD) Maciej Domański, Bogusław Lackoroński, 2023-11-30 This book examines the implications of Article 12 of the UN Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities CRPD its resulting standard of protection for persons with disabilities and the way it is understood and implemented in its diverse signatory states Its overarching theme is to assess the impact of CRPD Article 12 on the private law concept of legal capacity and its limitations the significance of which carries over into the realm of penal law regulations Its impact is analysed primarily from the legal point of view but with due regard for its psychological and psychiatric ramifications Recognising the importance of these disciplines is important when implementing CRPD Article 12 into domestic law as they contribute to the determinants in creating a qualificatory legal framework for all persons with disabilities in particular to exercise their rights to legal capacity without let or hindrance As active legal capacity is a notion rooted in and coming from private law this forms the main research perspective The first section discusses the foundational concepts constituting the CRPD Article 12 standard from domestic private law and international law perspectives The work shows that the concepts adopted in private law interact with the protection of persons with disabilities as victims provided for in criminal law In addition where relevant authors also look at public law institutions that are connected with the private law solutions The volume will be an essential reference for academics researchers and policy makers working in the areas of private law criminal law mental health law human rights discrimination law as well as psychology and psychiatry

Lindemann,2012-12-06 A relationship between the disciplines of psychology and medicine is evident in writings from the beginnings of recorded history This inter action was characterized in some epochs by mutual interest and support only to be followed by periods of relative disinterest During the past century there have been several formal attempts to acknowledge this interdependence and to revive and codify on a more permanent basis the working relationships between practitioners and scientists from both psychology and medicine These twentieth century waves of interest which have also come and gone have been identified by such names as psychosomatic medicine and rehabilitation psychology For a variety of reasons notably the lack of a sufficient knowledge base in either discipline the desired partnership has not come to full flower This state of affairs seems to be changing as we enter the last two decades of the twentieth century In the American Psychologist in September 1980 I reviewed recent developments in psychology and in medicine and in federal and private funding patterns which give evidence of revitalizing this partnership between these two disciplines and their relevant subspecialties For example after six decades of spectacular biomedical scientific advances which have all but eradicated such life threatening diseases as polio myelitis and tuberculosis leaders in medicine the behavioral sciences and other segments of society reached a consensus during the 1970s that the behavior of the individual is one of today's unexplored frontiers for modern medical practice and related good health care

Early Therapeutic, Social and Vocational Problems in the Rehabilitation of Persons with Spinal Cord Injuries Marian Weiss, 2013-06-29 Dr Marian Weiss textbook reviewing the etiology pathophysiology philosophy and conservative vs surgical management of spinal and spinal cord injury is a significant contribution to the world literature The remarks which follow are intended to serve the reader as a surgeon's thumb nail sketch of the text's contents along with brief comments on areas of agreement or mild variance of the opinions expressed Dr Weiss statement that the average surgical team often becomes more emotionally involved with the good or doubtful prognosis case at the expense of the victim with a hopeless prognosis is totally valid The percentage number of surgical spinal cases are insignificant when compared with the number of surgical admissions. As a result, little appropriate knowledge is amassed by the average surgeon to allow for competence or confidence in the management of the spinal injured patient's total problems. The opinion is correct that spinal trauma should be managed in Spinal Injury Centers where access to the entire array of specialists required by quadriplegic or paraplegic victims is available. Such comprehensive programs are most appropriately affiliated with University Medical Centers.
