There is lots of research in the field of gender differences in language use. This essay looked at varieties between the genders in verbal and nonverbal communication with the aim to find out which variables characterize the language use of each gender. In the field of talkativeness the researchers got opposite results; therefore nothing can be said about which gender has a larger amount of the conversation. Looking at the other points of comparison between the genders it could be detected that women use more affiliative speech which includes the use of different stylistic devices to avoid making a clear statements. Besides the observation of their visual behaviour showed that women use their view for orientation and as a source for information e.g. about their communication partner. Furthermore they use eye contact for getting a feedback about their own behaviour from their communication partner feeling uncomfortable when they can't see their opposite. In addition women are more involved use more expressions and feel easily embarrassed. Overall these results indicate unambiguously that women have a submissive communication style. Men on the contrary use affiliative sp.

Different but Equal Kay Payne, 2001-02-28. This study presents a theoretical and practical discussion of the changes that have occurred between men and women and how the sexes relate to one another from social, political and ethical perspectives. Not only do men and women reflect different gender roles through communication but they are also impacted by communication about gender especially from the media. Gender differences in communication have gained political importance due to the increasingly relevant issues of sexual harassment and political correctness. These social and political changes have influenced our value systems and have given the study of gendered communication an ethical importance. Payne argues that religious ideology is an important aspect of gendered development and that biological, psychological, social and cultural phenomena also affect sex roles. This volume will appeal to scholars and students in the communications disciplines as well as psychologists and sociologists. Organized around three major themes: the construction of the gendered self, the differences between men and women as they relate to one another through language, power and nonverbal communication, and the effects of gendered communication in leadership and the media, this work covers much ground on the topic of communication between the sexes.
