Sounds American Ann Ostendorf, 2011-09-15 Sounds American provides new perspectives on the relationship between nationalism and cultural production by examining how Americans grappled with musical diversity in the early national and antebellum eras During this period a resounding call to create a distinctively American music culture emerged as a way to bind together the varied changing and uncertain components of the new nation This played out with particular intensity in the lower Mississippi River valley and New Orleans especially Ann Ostendorf argues that this region often considered an exception to the nation with its distance from the center of power its non British colonial past and its varied population actually shared characteristics of many other places eventually incorporated into the country thus making it a useful case study for the creation of American culture Ostendorf conjures the territory's phenomenally diverse music ways including grand operas and balls performances by church choirs and militia bands and itinerant violin instructors Music was often associated with foreigners in particular Germans French Irish and Africans For these outsiders music helped preserve collective identity But for critics concerned with developing a national culture this multitude of influences presented a dilemma that led to an obsessive categorization of music with racial ethnic or national markers Ultimately the shared experience of categorizing difference and consuming this music became a unifying national phenomenon Experiencing the Germans in the Civil War Walter D. Kamphoefner, Wolfgang Helbich, 2009-09-15 German Americans were one of the largest immigrant groups in the Civil War era and they comprised nearly 10 percent of all Union troops Yet little attention has been paid to their daily lives both on the battlefield and on the home front during the war This collection of letters written by German immigrants to friends and family back home provides a new angle to our understanding of the Civil War experience and challenges some long held assumptions about the immigrant experience at this time Originally published in Germany in 2002 this collection contains more than three hundred letters written by seventy eight German immigrants men and women soldiers and civilians from the North and South Their missives tell of battles and boredom privation and profiteering motives for enlistment and desertion and for avoiding involvement altogether Although written by people with a variety of backgrounds these letters describe the conflict from a distinctly German standpoint the editors argue casting doubt on the claim that the Civil War was the great melting pot that eradicated ethnic antagonisms
